INSTRUCTOR SPOTLIGHT

Alan HAWKINS

Alan Hawkins is an Improviser from Los Angeles and Chicago and has just started his first beginning improv course at Highline. He has performed across the United States and even in London.

How did you get started in improv?
I've been acting since 1984 and have always loved doing improv, but I began to work seriously at the art form in 2004 at the Second City Conservatory in Los Angeles. From there, I did the Second City Musical Improv Conservatory and the iO West program.

So you’re pretty funny?
My wife and kids would say, “No.” to me, comedy is not so much about being funny as being honest. Comedy is a side effect of honesty.

How did you get into teaching?
I started teaching almost as soon as I graduated from the Conservatory. I had a friend that taught drama at the high school level, and he needed someone to teach improv, so he hired me. Pretty soon, word got around, and I was teaching at multiple high schools.

Do you need to be an actor or a comedian to take your class?
Not at all! Improv is a great way to improve day to day communication and is a lot of fun. The only way to fail is not to try.

How’s your first class going at Highline?
So much fun! Every one of the students is a total smarty-pants, and we laugh through the whole class. It’s a lot of fun. I’m excited to see how this program grows at the college.
INSTRUCTOR SPOTLIGHT

Sarah CROASDILL

Sarah has been a professional freelance makeup artist, focusing most of her career on brides and commercial makeup. Some of her clients have included: Starbucks, Zumiez, Dell and the Seahawks.
