Food prices are 'fair,' but service is 'below par'

by Dineen Gruver

Highline's food prices are "at least fair," but Food Services are "below par, in cases approaching total inadequacy as to traffic flow and speed of service."

These statements are contained in a report to college President Orville D. Carnahan from a Food Services Evaluation Committee.

The committee has concluded that food service is "generally above average in terms of its quality and variety," and that "the price of most items is at least fair, commensurate with other markets, and generally irreproachable."

However, the committee did feel the school's hamburgers "seem over-priced considering the item served." The committee also commented that for the price of coffee, "a person should be entitled to at least one refill."

Criticism of price increases and comments on Food Services made last year spurred the investigation, Carnahan has said.

Most food service problems, the committee feels, stem from inadequate facilities. The cafeteria needs to be "drastically revised if our desire is to increase the overall efficiency of the cafeteria," the report says. Acquiring adequate storage space was given high priority.

Due to the inadequate facilities, the committee continued, "most aspects of the service in the cafeteria are below par, in cases approaching total inadequacy as to traffic flow and speed of service."

Dr. Charles Sandifer, chairman of the committee, recently commented that Food Services has only shown a profit once in the past five years. During that period the school has absorbed a net loss of over $11,000 in Food Service operations.

To correct this situation, the committee suggested "that some consideration should be given to limiting the menu in certain respects. . . the committee questions the continued use of complete lunches, without data that shows a demand and need for them on a daily basis."

The preparation of fresh pastry was also questioned by the committee with the suggestion that the time spent making donuts could be used more wisely.

Other recommendations made by the committee include the development of more snack bars and the use of vending machines.

At the committee's request a section on "Personnel" was deleted from the copy of the report T-Word obtained from Carnahan's office. However, according to the report, "the committee recommends that the Personnel Office examine the issues of sick and vacation pay, employee classifications, duties and rights as they pertain to the Food Service personnel."

The report also protests the fact that the two student representatives on the committee failed to show up at over 75 per cent of the committee meetings.

In addition to Sandifer, the Food Services Evaluation Committee included Ann Toth, business instructor; Cathy Buss, registration office manager; and Jack Chapman, director of security.

discrimination in athletic finances

The ignominy of discrimination has once again reared its ugly head. The victim is again female; the arena is college athletics.

Those of us who are somewhat enlightened are depressingly aware that it is a rarity for a woman to be granted an athletic scholarship. However, should she be so bestowed, she is declared ineligible for national competition in the sport in which she won the award. Is that reminiscent of Alice in Wonderland? Maybe we should peer further into the rabbit hole!

It appears that men are still awarded scholarships on the basis of athletic ability and minimal academic achievement. That could be substantiated by the hordes of semi-illiterate football players, which abound on the T.V. each weekend during the football season.

However a woman "student may not maintain athletic eligibility if she receives assistance designated for a woman athlete, or when athletic talent is the criterion for selection."

Thus states the ruling of the fledgling Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women. This is an affiliate of the Division of Girls' and Womens' Sports, which has been the governing body for women's sports for years.

According to Dr. Jo Ann Thorpe, chairwoman of the Women's Physical Education Department, Southern Illinois University, increased interest in women's athletics led to the establishment of AIAW.

The women arrived at their decision on such a ruling, through discussion with the men! They were informed that the major problems encountered in men's college athletics are scholarships and recruiting. Thus, "elimination of financial aid in any form for which athletic talent is a criterion for selection eliminates both problems."

However Dr. Thorpe believes that strict interpretation of this is "too severe, discriminatory and possibly illegal."

Litigation is pending, charged by a woman tennis player who was prohibited from playing in the Women's National Collegiate Tennis Championships, because she was on athletic scholarships.

The obvious discrepancy in funding between men's and women's athletics in college is insult enough, without rubbing salt into the wound, via discrimination in financial awards.

All who are concerned about the continuation of college athletic competition, must surely be in support of a positive outcome to this litigation.

Otherwise we must ensure that men's athletics are similarly restricted. Then we shall most certainly witness the financial demise of the Sonny Sixkillers of the future.

shutterbug class

Photography has become one of the foremost art forms of the twentieth century. There are countless magazines and papers that utilize the works of thousands of professional and amateur photographers. Many photographers are even displaying their works in galleries that were once the exclusive habitats of painters and sculptors.

The popularity of photography has spread immensely in the past decade, with dozens of excellent brands of cameras at prices that many people can afford. It is very easy for any amateur photographer to set up his or her own darkroom for developing prints.

In consideration of all these factors, it is amazing that the Highline Art Department does not see the necessity of offering even the most basic of photography courses, including darkroom techniques, such as most high schools offer to their students.

Hopefully, the art department will take this modest proposal into consideration.

for whites only

The pictorial directory of the Washington State legislature reveals that 40 per cent of the State's senators belong to fraternal organizations whose memberships discriminate against non-white males and females.

Such organizations are defined by the Washington State Coalition against Discrimination as white racist fraternities. This is: "... a private lodge or club who denies membership to non-whites, when being white is not relevant to the stated purposes of the lodge or club."

The objectives of the B.P.O.E. (Benevolent and protective order of Elks), for example is to practice fidelity, brotherhood, charity and a belief in God and country. However in order to be considered for membership, one must be white and male!

Are we to assume then, that such lofty morals are not bestowed on all females and non-white males? If that be the case, the back of our white brother will inevitably be crushed from the weight of such an awesome burden.

With their social frame of reference so over-whelmingly chauvinistic, we seriously question the ability of those senators to vote objectively, on issues of concern to women and minority men.

letters to the editor

Former student reflects upon changes

Editor:

Five years is a long time to be away from anything, then try to come back. Highline is not one of those exceptions that proves the rule.

I was a student here in 1967 and 1968 and — like a wine — most of the college has grown more mellow with age. In 1968, I left the campus as a mudhole and now return to find that the landscaping which had been promised us for so long is reality. It came too late for me to enjoy as a student, but on returning, makes my memories a little more plush.

I'm writing this letter at a typewriter in the editorial room of the Thunder Word, a place not entirely foreign to me. I spent two years churning out stories, features and an occasional inflammatory editorial.

I was associate editor of the Highline rag — a namer at that time most befitting — and editor for a year. The muscatel which we made then has turned to claret. Beaujolais is yet to come.

I think the students here can be proud of their school. It's an attractive corner of educational mecca that can be the foundation of years of memories, if nothing else.

The students look much the same as they did in 1968, but then much less than a generation has passed since I left.

Let me relate to you for an instance or two to set the scene of Highline Community College, 1968:

—Students for Democratic Society was a going — if not strong — concern,

—there were no pool tables in the lounge (a travesty),
—the buildings all had anglo names,

—there were demonstrations, all non-violent — none of us had the courage or the conviction to really get fightin' mad,

—the covered walkways were not covered completely, and —the food in the cafeteria didn't seem nearly as palatable.

— can't wait to see it in 1978.

Strikers seek aid

To The Editor:

There are 165 courageous people at the Dow Chemical plant in Bay City which has been on strike for 14 months. They would like to enlist the aid of your newspaper and members of the student body so that we may survive. Dow Chemical is using its unlimited resources in an attempt to destroy us economically and eliminate the collective bargaining process of our Local Union which is 14055 of the United Steelworkers.

Many workers and their families have suffered unlimited hardships in the loss of income and personal property which they have had to sell in order to feed their families because Dow Chemical refuses to resolve an unjust labor dispute provoked by Dow Chemical and its local management.

In the interest of humanity we ask that you print this letter in your college paper and that the student body aid us by refusing to buy Handi-wrap plastic food wrap and Ziploc bags which are made at the Bay City plant.

If there are individuals or groups on campus who would like to aid us in this humane endeavor, please contact me at the address which is given below. We request that they boycott the above mentioned products which are produced by Dow Chemical in Bay City and by any other aid or activities which may aid our cause.

Thank you,

Ann Toth, faculty member in Business, was honored as Woman of the Year at the annual installation banquet of the White Center Chamber of Commerce last month. Guests of honor were Mayor Wes Uhlman and King County Tax Assessor Harley Hoppe.

The award was based mainly on work she contributed to the newly initiated Community Involvement Program under the direction of the Community Development Department of the University of Washington.

The program which was launched last June consisted of three phases: survey, study and action. Toth's assignments included organizing a speakers' bureau with ten speakers (including the chairman) who made 42 appearances before civic, fraternal, political and PTA groups in the community to inform them of the program, solicit volunteer surveyors and committee members, and create an awareness of the survey. She also prepared materials and served as coordinator of the largest surveyed area.

Upon completion of the survey, the area has now formed the White Center Action Council for which she has been elected Secretary. Toth is a widow with six children. She joined the full time faculty at Highline in 1969.

Board approves tenure and complies with 276

The Board of Trustees at their monthly meeting last week approved tenure for four staff members and adopted rules for access to public records.

Those receiving tenure were Edward McNulty, law enforcement; Mariner Manchester, business administration; Jean Scheideman, nursing; and Ingrid Simonson, coordinator of student activities.

Permanent rules for access to public records (those records kept by the school) were adopted without comment. The rules were written to conform to the requirements of Initiative 276 which recently became a state law.

The rules outline procedures for making the college's public records, as defined in Initiative 276, available to the public.

At the same meeting, President Orville D. Carnahan told the board about the State Board for Community College Education guidelines concerning student activity fees. Out of every guidelines, students will become directly involved in the budgeting process but only on an informational basis. The final decision would still rest with the local boards of trustees.

Carpenters due at PLU

The Carpenters appear at Olson Auditorium on the Pacific Lutheran University campus for two concert performances (7:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m.) Thursday, May 3.

Since their recording of "Close To You" over three years ago, The Carpenters have collected three Grammy's and turned out many hits, most of them million dollar sellers. Currently they are high on the record charts with a single entitled "Sing and an A & M album, A Song for You."

In their concert appearances, The Carpenters engagingly project the warmth of Karen Carpenter's rich voice and the catchy musical arrangements of brother Richard, who plays the piano with unmistakable talent. In addition to her vocal abilities Karen is a highly respected drummer for the group. The Carpenters are backed by lead guitarist Gary Sims, bassist Danny Woodams, clarinetist and marimba player Doug Strawn and Bob Messenger who plays electric bass, saxophone and flute.

Appearing with The Carpenters are the comedy duo Skiles and Henderson. The pair have performed on many television variety shows and appeared as regulars on the Goldiggers summer show.

Tickets for the concert are on sale at the Bon Marche (Tacoma and Seattle), Pacific Lutheran University and the University of Puget Sound. The tickets are priced at $4 and $5.

To some, America is a foreign country

Auburn attorney Michael J. Sligh contends that foreign students do not always receive a fair shake from the Immigration and Naturalization Service. (See Thunder Word, April 13, 1973.)

Sligh has reviewed over 300 deportation appeals from late 1969 to the present (of that number only two deportation orders were reversed) and has come up with the following composite case history. The student represented in this story is fictitious.

by Dineen Gruver

David Yuan was a full-time foreign student in Denver, receiving good grades. His parents had saved for years so that their son could leave Hong Kong and attend college in the United States.

When David arrived in the U.S. and started school, he discovered he had merely enough money to pay for tuition and books and not much else. He decided he could subsist, but he would have to remain confined to the campus.

Eventually, he discovered some of his friends, also from Hong Kong, were working part-time in a machine shop. They told him that he could work a couple hours a week without getting in touch with the Immigration Service.

David received a part time job, working for more than the minimum hourly wage. Since the employer, a man of authority, had accepted him, David did not suspect he was violating Immigration Service requirements. He had read that Americans in the past had beaten and shot Chinese, partly because employers hired them for lower wages than the white man was willing to work. However, that was history, and David was working for a legal wage.

One day while David was walking home from work an immigration officer stopped him and asked for his passport and status card. The officer asked if David was working. With a lunch box under one arm and a company badge pinned to his shirt, David could not very well lie.

Had he lied, his employment being a matter of record with the machine shop, it would have been no problem for the Immigration Service to prove otherwise.

The officer took David's passport since he did not have a work permit and informed David that he would have to appear at a deportation hearing.

At the hearing, David was informed of his right to remain silent. He was also told that he could have an attorney "at no expense to the government."

Before the hearing examiner, an employee of the Immigration Service, David saw the immigration officer relay David's admission that he had been working. David's application for student status was presented as evidence. In small print on the form was the stipulation that the undersigned agreed not to seek employment. David's signature was affixed to the form.

In his David could say that he was not aware of the fact that he could not seek work. The hearing examiner said that was not sufficient and that David was deportable.

Because David was of good moral character and had enough money to finish the quarter and obtain passage home, the hearing examiner ruled that David be allowed "voluntary departure."

Otherwise, David would have been taken into custody and deported immediately.

Had David lied about his employment, according to Immigration Service procedures, he would have committed a "willful violation" and would likely not have received voluntary departure.

For a $25 filing fee, David could have appealed the decision. A notice of the appeal would have been sent to Washington D.C. and a decision would have been made within 30 to 60 days, most probably upholding the hearing examiner's decision. He did not appeal.

Upon completion of the quarter, David Yuan returned to Hong Kong, his college education incomplete.

Three members of the West Seattle high school paper, first place winners in the Excellence in Journalism awards, visited the Thunder-Word newsroom last week to personally extend congratulations to the first place community college winners.

CLEP

Is it a new pigeonhole for students?

Analysis . . .

by Brian Moe

CLEP (College-level Examination Program) is offering people a chance to earn a full year's credit in some courses by taking a one or two hour test for credit.

The fact that students may obtain credit by examination has come under serious consideration by many, including the faculty at Highline. There are some questions as to whether the CLEP exams accurately measure that which a student is supposed to learn, or if it is just a clerical device used for classifying people.

According to the College Entrance Examination Board, a non-profit national organization that conceived CLEP, the program is intended to serve the non-traditional student who has acquired knowledge through correspondence and university extension courses, educational television, adult education programs, on-the-job training and independent study.

It is also proving extremely useful to the traditional student who moves directly from secondary school to college. It is precisely with the traditional student that the questions are being raised.

William Hofmann, English instructor at Highline, does not believe that CLEP is an instructional device, but that it only measures where a student is at a certain time. He called it a clerical device, used for pigeon-holing people.

Hofmann stated that it becomes too convenient for clerks and administrators to give credit to, and possibly in the future, to graduate students for taking certain examinations.

Anyone may register and, for 15 or 25 dollar fee, take one or several of the CLEP exams. CLEP does not grant college credit itself, but approximately 900 colleges in all fifty states now offer college credit on the basis of CLEP scores, and the number is growing.

In addition, again according to the College Entrance Exam Board, many businesses, industries, government agencies, and professional groups let students use these tests to meet their educational requirements for advancement, licensing, admission to further training and other benefits.

Hofmann fears that CLEP is being retooled toward being approved without having all aspects of it carefully examined. He believes it is preferable for the instructor to respond to the student on a one-to-one basis rather than with standardized tests.

Hofmann stated, "I trust the people in my division more than I trust clerks and tests."

Growing numbers of students are gaining college credits before they have even attended one class. It is not uncommon for a student to get a full year's worth of credits by examinations. A year's tuition, fees and other expenses are saved, and all that time is saved, but questions are raised as to the real purpose of colleges. Are people to learn and gain information in fields that interest them, or will colleges merely turn into

The Faculty Senate voted against recommending CLEP three weeks ago, and have sent their opinion to President Carnahan. In lieu of CLEP Faculty divisions are now preparing lists of courses which may be eligible for credit-by-exam as administered by the College Faculty.

diploma factories, passing out degrees as fast as students can pass their fifteen dollar "courses?"

To what extent do the exams measure that which a student is supposed to learn? There are no lecture sessions or lab hours for these college credits. Can a score of 100 per cent on a grammar test really mean a student can write?

Highline has a present policy whereby a student may contact the head of a department and take a test decided upon by the department as a whole. None of the CLEP standardized tests results are now being accepted for credit by Highline.

Supporters emphasize that CLEP enables adults and unaffiliated students to demonstrate their knowledge and validate their learning by receiving college credit on the basis of exams.

Opponents cite drawbacks, such as allowing a student to pass up a year's worth of classes at the drop of a hat (and a few bucks).

There are at least three possibilities for alleviating the "railroading" of credits and degrees by examinations: (1) The College Entrance Examination Board can establish tighter screening of who they give CLEP tests to, or (2) Individual schools can establish tighter screening as to whom they will accept CLEP credits from, or (3) Individual schools can continue to operate the way Highline is, with direct teacher-student contact.

President Richard Nixon
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. President,

With peace being one of the great purposes and objectives of all Government, and all mankind, may I suggest we establish a "Secretary of Peace" as a full cabinet member of our Government. We have "Secretary of War, Commerce, Labor, Treasury, etc. — so why do we not have a "Secretary of Peace" if peace is in fact one of our great purposes.

Establishing such a cabinet position would demonstrate to all Governments and to all people that we not only talk of peace but place such emphasis on our endeavor that we have an office in the highest place of our Government whose main purpose is to promote peace.

'Sleuth' — the battle of wits

by Randy Kusano

The games people play is the theme of director Joseph L. Mankiewicz's film Sleuth now playing at the UA Cinema 150.

Based on the play by Anthony Shaffer Sleuth deals with a battle of wits between an author of mysteries (Laurence Olivier) and the owner of a hairdressing salon (Michael Caine) both vying for the possession of Olivier's wife. The movie is billed as "the perfect crime," and so through a series of fake perfect crimes both adversaries try to deal the final humiliating blow which would determine the victor.

The acting of both Olivier and Caine is first-rate. Olivier, in an extremely versatile role, proves once again that he deserves the recognition as one of the world's great actors. Caine, not to be outdone, shows that he is not just another pretty face; his work as a cocky Anglo-Italian is at least equal to Olivier's.

Sleuth's only flaw is its lengthiness — two and a half hours. Mankiewicz succeeds in keeping his film in constant motion but some episodes are drawn out and a bit tiresome.

Excellent acting, direction, and script combine to make an engrossing, involved film, one I can readily recommend.

The Highline College links-men were the victims once again, as they dropped their third match in a row. The Centralia Trailblazers drubbed the T-Birds this time with a 323 to 356 thumping, the low score winning. The loss dropped the T-Birds league record to 1 win and 4 losses.

Highline's number one man, Mark Vernon, again led his team's charges with an 84. Steve Bell followed closely behind with an 85. Bob Rick and Larry Walker finished third and fourth for the T-Birds' final strokes. Rick had a 90 and Walker a 97. Centralia's Dennis Hayes had an outstanding afternoon as he recorded a two-over par 74. Steve Tviet followed Hayes with an 81 respectively.

The T-Bird golfers will be hosted by Grays Harbor this afternoon as the league heads into it's second round.

Alterowitz speaks on PE changes

Dr. Harold Alterowitz, Chairman of the Division of Health and Physical Education of Eastern Montana College in Billings, will return to the campus for the third time on April 30 and May 1.

The Physical Education specialist will speak in the Lecture Hall on Monday at 11:30 a.m. and at 3:15 p.m.

Dr. Alterowitz will hold a workshop in the campus pavilion. The workshop, entitled "Physical Education Has CHANGED" WILL FOCUS PRIMARILY ON ELEMENTARY SCHOOL LEVEL PE.

According to Phillip Swanberg, Activities Director, the workshop will serve three purposes. It will try to: 1) illustrate how physical education is an integrated part of the total curriculum of elementary school programs, 2; show physical education as a fun thing and how it can support other forms of learning and 3) show how physical education can be taught by the regular elementary school teacher without a need for special training. Both programs are open to the public.

On Tuesday, Dr. Alterowitz will work with the morning Physical Fitness classes in the Pavilion, demonstrating new expressions in physical education.

by Dineen Gruver

Seven Highline students will be among the estimated 400 to 500 participants competing in the first annual West Coast International Karate Championships in the Highline gym tomorrow.

The participants include men, women and children from the West Coast and Canada.

Those students scheduled to compete are Ken Yorozu, Don Kato, Ferdi Orbino, Bob Bragg, John Metzler, Mark Wesner and Jim Garner.

Eliminations will begin at 10 a.m. with the finals starting at 8 p.m. Grand championships will be decided in the colored, brown and black belt divisions.

There are two basic events in a karate tournament, kumite and kata.

Kumite is a sparring match between two fighters, an exercise in control of both mind and body. The attack is made with either the hands or the feet but must never actually touch the opponent's body. Points are awarded for each attack judged by the referees to be undefendable.

Kata involves a single fighter who demonstrates his various offensive and defensive techniques against four to eight imaginary opponents. His performance is judged on form, vigor, attitudes and self-control.

Besides the different belt divisions in karate, the contestants are divided into three different divisions — men's, women's and juniors'.

Japan's 83 year old karate grand master, Yasuhiro Konishi, will be attending the tournament. The grand master, after 60 years of practicing karate, still teaches in Tokyo.

The Shihan (grand master) Konishi award, a 30 inch trophy, will be presented to the black belt grand champion.

The tournament has been authorized by the All-Japan Karate Federation, the All-American Black Belt Association and the Western State Karate Federation. Sponsors of the tournament include KJR Radio, Kawaguchi Travel, Japan Air Lines, Bush Gardens and Squire Men's Shop.

Tickets for the event are on sale in the book store.

Security division 'aims to serve'

by Rich Rogala

"We aim to serve," is the goal of the Security Division as stated by Jack Chapman, Security Supervisor.

Some basic services provided by the division are: security of College property, security of students' vehicles and property on the college grounds, first aid, minor service to students' vehicles (battery jumps, open vehicles for "locked out" individuals, etc.), emergency contact of individuals on campus and the issuance of parking permits.

Records of accidents, offenses and traffic citations are kept in the Security Office. Information concerning campus activities can be obtained from any officer on duty (ball games, swim meets, dances, etc.).

Chapman advises that the Security Office is open Monday through Thursday — 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and on Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Security office can be reached through Community Services inner-campus extension 341, after hours and weekends. There is an officer on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week. On weekends the duty officer may be reached from off campus by calling TR 8-3712.

In addition to the service end of the security department, Chapman works with students in the Law Enforcement Program who are involved in the voluntary Student Patrolman Program. Here the students work for credit, are evaluated and graded and are introduced to the basic fundamentals of routine patrol and "paper-work" that are involved in the police profession.

There are various means of communications available to be used in any type of emergency situation, Chapman says. Perhaps the most unique communication device now being used is the direct-link radio with the King County Department of Public Safety that is installed in the campus patrol car. The unit is given a special call number that enables the officer to call or be called if necessary.

There is also a citizen band inter-college communication system that is utilized daily by the officers on duty. Chapman says it will soon be possible for the campus patrolmen to stay in radio contact with the City of Des Moines Police Department through the use of a special portable radio tuned to the Des Moines P.D. frequency. This will be of invaluable assistance for weekends and early morning shifts when there is no one on campus but the officer.

Chapman advises that even though thefts are down drastically from the past, students, faculty, and staff personnel should be sure to lock their vehicles. Also, instead of the commonplace saying "drive carefully" he says we should all be "friendly drivers."

Parking is always a problem. He urges drivers to stay in designated areas (A, B, C, M, etc.) and not to park in NO

PARKING zones, fire lanes, obvious loading zones, along roadways, near fire hydrants, visitor's area or on private property.

Avoid accidents by being especially careful when using College equipment. Report accidents, thefts, and other offenses as promptly as possible to the security officer on duty.

Copies of maps, traffic regulations and Student's Rights and Responsibilities are available in the Security Office, located in the North End of the Student Union Building right across from Student Activities.

There are five campus patrolmen (employed personnel), two student patrolmen, and two administrative assistants (clerks) in the Security Division.

Hobbies will be explored; some of which are expensive and others which involve purchase of equipment. Tips will be given on how to begin a book review club, gourmet club, etc.
