Board allots funds

OLYMPIA, WA. - The State Board for Community College Education has allocated more than $61 million in 1973-74 state operating funds to Washington's 22 community college districts. John C. Mundt, state director, has announced.

The Board discussed but did not act on a proposed statement of guidelines for "community-based learning" programs which provide on-the-job training and other practical experiences outside campus classrooms. Mundt explained.

"Washington community colleges have been interested in developing programs which provide on-the-job training and other practical experiences outside campus classrooms," Mundt said. "We also want to assure our neighbors that student interns will not displace regular workers from their jobs." He added.

Washington community colleges have adopted a number of alternatives to traditional classroom instruction in recent years, including a statewide program to provide practical off-campus experiences to supplement classroom learning.

"We want to assure our neighbors that student interns won't displace regular workers from their jobs," Mundt added.

Socialists meet today

A weekend of discussion and ideas on building a Socialist society will be held May 11 and 12 at the University of Washington. watergate: there is another side

Between Senator Sam Ervin and T-ward staffers, Brian Max and Janet Smith, one might be led to believe that Watergate has but one side. A simple opening of the eyes should reveal the other. The focus of most Watergate conversations deal with the question of who was involved. By that it is meant that he was or was not aware of the conspiracy. Time Magazine's latest poll April 30 shows 41 per cent of those ever hearing about the mess do believe that Nixon was with knowledge.

If what is believed to be true, in fact is true, then there may just be some worth in the President's personal blood-thirsty critique of the Deep Throat. But then there is the other side and the litter is equal.

The other side believes that President Nixon did not have prior knowledge about the Watergate conspiracy. This does seem more realistic.

It is unlikely that anyone but an idiot or at least fool would, as President, give his consent to such obvious tactics. It is apparent that many Nixon critics are calling him just that. It is also obvious that any over-exuberant campaign leader would not actually let Nixon know how some of the campaign research was being conducted. Over half of the country still believes Nixon morality would come through and stop any proposed activity before it started.

In a nationwide Sunday morning, the President did take responsibility for the scandal. Many in the news media and government have questioned his slow methods of facing the problem straight off. At the beginning it should be noted that Nixon still had faith in the aides he had selected and certainly wasn't ready to doubt them. The President was no doubt being protected from the truth by his friends, and he certainly had no cause to believe that his own inquiry would be less valid than that of the less-than-friendly lance. His methods may have been slow but more reasonably, they should be termed as cautious.

In time history will hopefully turn the Watergate mess into an understandable form. For the present, the country will have to understand on its own. For the sake of the country, that understanding will lead to truth and faith in the president again.

I was fortunate enough to see a film on Richard Nixon made by a group of California students. The film points out some of the underworld connections the President has in the "San Ben" states of Florida, Texas, California and Nevada. These four states have about 91% Electoral College votes, which is a vast increase over what the President had during World War II.

The film also goes on to point out the fact that Nixon is friends with such "shady" characters as Belle Rebozzo, Steney Lansky and "The Cowboys" (the Murdock Bros.).

Lansky, who owned much of Cuba's gambling interests, along with Battista, Cuba's Fascist dictator, was living quite high until a few years later, we have the Watergate Affair.

According to the report, Nixon was involved with a Wall Street firm which was using from "The Cowboys' financed CIA in-agent at the Bay of Pigs which was designed to assassinate Castro and put Batista and Lansky back into economic control of the island country.

Now, 12 years later, we have the Watergate Affair. God, how we wish more people were able to see the film. Just from this, it becomes more and more obvious to me what a lot of other people too. I hope that our President, Richard M. Nixon, is not innocent in his statement of "I knew nothing of what was going on,"

For me, I can't think of a better time to clean up once and for all the mess of Watergate, and all of Nixon's other "secrets" that are known but in a very few.

College needs female opinion

Dear Editor:

Students of the Bernard Baruch College in New York City would like the participation of female students in our college council.

Your opinion will influence the shaping of political platforms, constitutional amendments, and the future of Colleges and Industry. Make sure your opinion counts!

We want to know what you think of the Women's rights movement - pro or con, how you evaluate educational opportunities and your prospects for success after graduation, your attitudes toward males and the established sex roles in society.

To participate in this poll, just send your name, address and tip-end to EQUITABLE 3 5037, Hempstead, N.Y. 11554 and we will send you a survey form. The results of this study will be distributed to legislature leaders, major corporations and Universities.

This major research project is being conducted by students of the Graduate Division, Bernard Baruch College, University of New York, N.Y.

Eleven community college are participating in a project for library cooperation which will provide access and circulation to all students and staff in participating schools, as well as the sharing of equipment, materials and services. Franck Denisus, North Seattle college, is project leader. He was a former Highline librarian.

They can't go back where they came from

Why Wounded Knee?

by Karen Olson

Wounded Knee 1890 is recorded in American history as the last "battle" of the Indian wars. One-hundred-twenty men, and 250 women and children were the "victims," and nearly 300 of them were killed.

The battle climaxed an era of openly brutal and shameless extermination of Native Americans by Europeans who regarded their conquest of the New World as their "manifest destiny." Today we are faced with Wounded Knee, 1973, and history threatens to repeat itself—the government is being forced by a rash and desperate expression of outrage by people who talk of being ready to martyr themselves for their cause. Their cause is the restoration of their existence. Their numbers have been lost prior to Wounded Knee, the government of openly brutal and shameless expression of outrage by people who talk of being ready to martyr themselves for their cause.

When the Nez Perce refused to forsake their lands and tried to flee to Canada, they were pursued mercilessly, and forced into reservations. They were forbidden to hunt, and their activities were destroyed. This is the 100 years of BIA (Bureau of Indian Affairs) effort to help them through a conscience, and the Indians were hung with the heresy of the westward march of the white man.

The Indian had been suppressed, and the U.S. government had established its power over them.

Brochure assists vets

A brochure for veterans has been published by Highline in an effort to help Indian veterans through the paperwork and procedures to receive their benefits and education opportunities. "A brochure to assist veterans," commented Booker T. Watt, Jr., registrar and director of admissions at Highline College, "is a good vehicle to help take the hurdle out of going back to school.

Election results

100 students voted in the ASB general election held last Friday and Monday. Gary Nestler, Chet Miranda, and Antonio ake seat as senators. All ran uncontested.

Lloyd Stewart won the only contested position in the election, vice-president, against Jim Sloan, with a 54 to 39 vote. According to Mike Burgquist, present vice-president, the close results show greater student participation in student government.

The election still leaves six open seats to be filled. Two freshman and one sophomore position will be open for the general election this fall. The Aztec, Indian, and Black student organizations will appoint one senator each to represent them.

No one born an actor' says drama director

The drama department offers."No one was born an actor'," says drama director Jean Smith, "just as no one was born a singer or a dancer. All are skills that can be learned."

The drama department offers drama courses every quarter. Offered on an intensive basis are courses in directing, acting, technical theatre and music. There is an intensive and a non-intensive on-course for courses in directing, acting, and technical theatre.

"There are no hard and fast rules," says Smith, "just as there is no limit to the talent of actors. There are many who have been trained in the arts of drama and have become successful actors. The study of drama is as important as the study of music or math. It is a part of a well-rounded education."

Bird linksmen edged twice

The Highline College linksmen dropped a pair of matches last week, putting themselves deeper into the league’s cellar. Olympic and Clark Colleges did it to the T-Birds this time. Coupled with these two losses, Highline’s league record fell to 1-20, 3-16, 6-13.

On April 30, Highline hosted the league’s number two team, Olympic College. The T-Birds played their best golf of the year but were edged by the fine Olympic team 309 to 311 (low score wins). Highline was led by Mark Vernon, who had a 75. Larry Walker followed with an 81. Steve Bell and Bob Nick finished out the T-Birds scoring with an 89 and 90. Clarid’s Kevin Bishop had a fine round as he recorded a one over-par 79 which included an eagle on the last hole. Frank Merriweather followed Bishop with a 71 respectively.

Highline has one remaining league match, as they host Centralia College today.

Netters beat UPS; show well at UW

Last week the women’s tennis team traveled to the University of Puget Sound and defeated the lady Loggers 6-1. The team also competed in the University of Washington Invitational Tournament that was dominated by the strong Western Washington team that took three firsts, one second, and a third in the five events. Highline scored third in both a first place finish.

On May 4, the defending state champions Clark College visited Highline’s home grounds. Clark came away with a 218 to 342 victory, adding to Highline’s injuring. The T-Birds’ Mark Vernon again led his team with a 79. Larry Walker followed with an 81. Steve Bell and Bob Nick finished out the T-Birds scoring with an 89 and 90. Clarid’s Kevin Bishop had a fine round as he recorded a one over-par 79 which included an eagle on the last hole. Frank Merriweather followed Bishop with a 71 respectively.

Mark Vernon led the T-Birds with a 79 after 18 holes.
Winning was easy for the Highline track team as it won the 10th Annual Thunderbird Invitational last Saturday. While Highline piled up 120 points to nearest competitor, Green River Community College, scored 52 points.

The Thunderbirds of HC were led in their efforts with the help of Art Devers who won both the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Devers also ran a leg of both winning 440 and mile relay. Highline dominated the meet by winning twelve out of the seventeen events and by picking up almost as many second places.

Sophomore Jerry Fulwider ran the surprise race of the day by showing the value of patience and determination. He was led in their efforts with John Wells (long jump), Mike Prato (100, 220, mile relay). Heintel who won twelve out of the seventeen events and by picking up almost as many second places.

Devers (300, 220, mile relay).

The 440 dash was won by a 1972 graduate of Evergreen High School, Mike Prato. Prato, previously on the injured list, ran an exceptional race of 44.8 seconds, considering the bad weather conditions.

'Border-hopper' reflects on E. Germany

by Sharon Hendler

At age 30, she jumped the border as a border-hopper when the age of 42, she returned from what she considers E. Germany to her native country, New York. The trip was a recent interview with the author.

With the U.S. publication of 'The Spectator' and 'The Spectator' at the age of 30, she returned from the U.S. and decided to reflect on East Germany during a recent interview with the author.

Highline instructor, Schimmelbusch, said the East German government made everything free because they wanted people to be happy.

Schimmelbusch said that after the East German government made everything free, people started to think more about happiness. East German culture encouraged the idea that happiness was not just a matter of having enough food and clothes, but also of having a positive outlook on life. Schimmelbusch referred to this change as the "Highline movement," which encouraged people to think more about happiness and to be content with what they had.

Professor advocates honesty about sex

by Jose Salas

Dr. Wagner, professor of psychology and psychiatry at Washington University, is a frequent guest speaker at the HCEA. He regularly speaks on the topic of honesty in family relations.

"No man is an island," he said, "and no man is totally alone. We all need to communicate with others, and we need to be honest in our communication." Dr. Wagner emphasized the importance of honesty in family relations, and he encouraged parents to talk to their children about sex and to be honest in their communication.

Schimmelbusch compared government in China today with the East German government.

"Americans would not want to pay the East German government.

"Americans get upset because they have no idea of the brutality and power of the people ruled by the East German government."

He went on to say, "if Americans were to visit East Berlin, they would never want to go back. The East German government is brutal and has no respect for the people of the East."

"The Highline instructor referred to the country as having a 'socialist order.' He said that it would be much better to pay the East German government, but he also said that it was important to be honest in our communication."
