Student Council proposes campus task force

by Melodie Steiget

The Highline College Student Union was allocated a portion of the full-time accreditation for night students at its regular HCC council meeting held recently. The students were then tasked with forming a student council task force to study problems concerning the night student credit issue.

The full-time accreditation for night students will not be given out to student council members. The student council will be tasked with forming a student council task force to study problems concerning the night student credit issue.

When the night student credit issue finally comes to the Faculty Senate, the Student Affairs Council, and the Instructional Council, but the HCSU has received no news on this matter. According to Greg Hartman, student affairs councillor for the HCSU, "We have not heard anything so far, but we are keeping our fingers crossed."

Notice of the proposed program has gone to the Student Affairs Council, the Instructional Council, and the Intercollegiate Council, but the HCSU has received no news on this matter. According to Greg Hartman, student affairs councillor for the HCSU, "We have not heard anything so far, but we are keeping our fingers crossed."

The difficulty, brought to the attention of a student council, is the lack of resources. Night students have to work during the day and attend classes at night, so they are often exhausted by the time they get home. The student council task force is being formed to study these problems and come up with solutions.

HCSU council meeting held on Feb. 14, room 19-203, with requests for more volunteers from the Student Affairs Council. The council meets every week to discuss student issues and concerns. The council is made up of students who are elected by their peers to represent their interests.

The council holds meetings to discuss various issues affecting students. The meetings are open to the public and are advertised in the college paper. The council is an important part of the student government at Highline College.

Free tutoring available in new Library center

by Allen Lyle

The HCSU council meeting held recently at the library center. The council heard about the availability of free tutoring in the library center.

The tutorial center is now in operation in the new Library center, and using tutors in labs, and as needed. The sessions are conducted between the hours of 12:30 and 3:30, Monday through Thursday. The center offers tutoring in any subject, and is free to all students. The sessions are conducted in the library center, and are staffed by experienced tutors.

The tutorial center is a great resource for students who need help with their studies. The tutors are knowledgeable and experienced, and are able to help students with a variety of subjects. The center is open to all students, and is located in the new Library center.

James gives view of the 'Russian Doomsday Machine'

by Aaron De Anda

James, an employee of the United States Embassy in Moscow, has written a book called "The Russian Doomsday Machine." The book is a collection of essays and articles written by James over a period of 20 years. James is a former diplomat who has spent a significant amount of time in Russia, and has written extensively about the country and its politics.

James has written about the Russian military and its history, and has provided insights into the Soviet military establishment. He has written about the importance of the military in Russian society, and has provided insights into the role of the military in Russian politics. James has also written about the history of the Soviet Union, and has provided insights into the role of the military in the collapse of the Soviet Union.

James has written about the importance of the military in Russian society, and has provided insights into the role of the military in Russian politics. He has also written about the history of the Soviet Union, and has provided insights into the role of the military in the collapse of the Soviet Union.

James has written about the importance of the military in Russian society, and has provided insights into the role of the military in Russian politics. He has also written about the history of the Soviet Union, and has provided insights into the role of the military in the collapse of the Soviet Union.
Four-day week feasibility studied by HCSU

by Roger Ward

In the face of spiraling fuel costs and the concern for conserving gasoline, the Highline College Student Union has conducted a study on the feasibility of adopting a four-day work week.

The study, led by HCSU president, explored the possibility of a four-day work week. Roberts attested that fewer classrooms would be required during the week. The summer and night school programs, which have already been evaluated on a four-day schedule, and Big Bend Community College have adopted the plan for day classes.

The HCSU survey found that a four-day work week would be acceptable to students. Roberts added that fewer classrooms would be required during the week, and the Student Union is exploring alternatives to ease the effect on the faculty and students.

The Faculty Senate has approved the idea. Ward added that fewer classrooms would be required during the week, and the Student Union is exploring alternatives to ease the effect on the faculty and students.

Kitties do, Kiddies don't

Efforts are being made in the Child Development Center to reduce enrollment costs. Apparently, in need of a warm place to sleep and socialize, Kitties are using the CDC sandbox for a small hotel. Unfortunately, Kitties are leaving the deposit in their room.

In the interest of health and welfare of the small creatures who are supposed to be using the sandbox, CDC contractors requested that a cover be built to discourage Kitties' appointed routes.

The cover was built—a large wooden affair built like an A-frame house and too heavy for any of the students to lift. Kitties didn't mind. Any nimble, ingenious feline worth half his weight in camou should scramble inside to continue its activities in the dry, warm sandbox.

The CDC people apparently decided not to take up weight lifting, so the cover was returned, much to Kitty's relief.

Harold awarded KING scholarship

The KING TV $500 scholarship was awarded to Faye Harold, journalism major, at the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees on Thursday, Feb. 21. Betty Streblau, journalism instructor, made the presentation.

In setting up the scholarship, KING stipulated that it was to be awarded to "a full-time student who is majoring in a field related to radio and television broadcasting or cable services. The student must show promise for a broadcasting career as demonstrated through academic accomplishments."

In presenting the award Streblau said that Harold was a national honor medalist from Lincoln High School in Tacoma. This enabled her to win over 5 percent of graduating high school seniors in the nation.

At Highline, Harold has a 4.0 grade point average, Streblau continued, and has done outstanding work as a reporter on the Thunderbird. This quarter she is the sports editor.

During the Spring Quarter, Harold will be developing a new program in Highline's TV studios, Streblau concluded.

"Awards are made to selected schools in the areas in which the company operates which offer courses related to the broadcasting and cable television industry," according to KING.

HCC qualifies for the scholarship award by offering broadcasting media courses which require students to do 30-minute newscasts using skills learned in that class explained Streblau. Tary

The first Family Life Fun Run, sponsored by Highline Community College and Club Northwest, will take place April 13. The 10,000 meter run (6.2 miles) will start and finish at the Joe Moses Marina.

There are seven divisions for the race according to age and sex of all ages are encouraged to enter. Trophies, ribbons, and many other prizes will be awarded to the top runners of each division. An entry fee of $3 will go to the HCC Family Life scholarship fund.

More information is available at the Club Northwest office at Highline Community College, major sporting outlets and public libraries in Federal Way, Burien and White Center.

Air Force ROTC

Gates, WA 98023

Write: AFR Rotc DET 900
University of Puget Sound
Tacoma, Washington 98416
Call: 756-3264

Fun Run to be held April 13

The Family Life Fun Run, sponsored by Highline Community College and Club Northwest, will take place April 13. The 10,000 meter run (6.2 miles) will start and finish at the Joe Moses Marina.

There are seven divisions for the race according to age and sex of all ages are encouraged to enter. Trophies, ribbons, and many other prizes will be awarded to the top runners of each division. An entry fee of $3 will go to the HCC Family Life scholarship fund.

More information is available at the Club Northwest office at Highline Community College, major sporting outlets and public libraries in Federal Way, Burien and White Center.
Five HCC students receive honors scholarships

The recipients of scholarships provided by the Board of Trustees at Highline Community College were announced at the Feb. 21 Board of Trustees meeting.

The scholarships, provided by the Washington Mutual Savings Bank, were awarded to five honors students. The grants amounted to $400 per student and will be used for tuition and book expenses.

The winners were: John Holtun, Jennifer Meier, Debra Baumgartner, Linda Jones and Constance Smith. A selection committee, headed by Joan Fedor, coordinator of the Honors Scholarship Program at HCC, examined the qualifications of the many applicants.

Holtun, a graduate of Weatherwax High School in Aberdeen, will be attending the University of Washington where he will pursue a career in medicine, according to Fedor.

Maine graduate of John F. Kennedy High School, she is skilled in the French and German languages and interested in a French career. She is interested in a business career.

Baumgartner is a graduate of University of Oregon and is studying for a degree in interior design and will attend Seattle University after graduation from HCC. She would someday like to operate her own business, said Fedor.

Both twins are Business Transfer students.

The twins started Judo lessons at the age of 10 when their father, James Demise, took them to the West Seattle Y.M.C.A. "Just for fun." By the time they were in ninth grade, they were "practicing hard." Under the supervision of their coach, Fred Sato, they began serious Judo, as each has his own friends. Jay and Fred assist their father in the 1978 tournament in Hawaii and Jay won first place and "best technique" in the tournament in Hawaii and Jay won first place and "best technique" in the tournament. The Demise twins earned their black belts in the high school national finals in Kent, Wash., in 1978. In this country, there isn't anyone to practice with. Most people quit Judo after high school, because there is no future in it. In Canada there is more interest, making it possible to practice every day, according to Jay.

Japan still leads the world in Judo. Their champions are promised teaching positions.

The Demise brothers find that being a twin has both advantages and disadvantages. Having someone to train with helps, but as one progresses higher, the others push harder to catch up. Together they pushed each other all the way to the championship.

The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. Jay enjoys tennis, golf, and while Fred plays basketball, Jay explained that friends and family have no trouble telling them apart.

Spring trees, southern Illinois, and the sunrise provide a perfect environment for Judo practice. The Demise twins are allowed to enter the national competition. The Demise twins are allowed to enter the national competition. The Demise twins are allowed to enter the national competition.

Jack Demise, coordinator of the Honors Scholastic Program at HCC, examined the qualifications of the many applicants.

Holtun, a graduate of Weatherwax High School in Aberdeen, will be attending the University of Washington where he will pursue a career in medicine, according to Fedor.

Maine graduate of John F. Kennedy High School, she is skilled in the French and German languages and interested in a French career. She is interested in a business career.

Baumgartner is a graduate of University of Oregon and is studying for a degree in interior design and will attend Seattle University after graduation from HCC. She would someday like to operate her own business, said Fedor.

Both twins are Business Transfer students.

The twins started Judo lessons at the age of 10 when their father, James Demise, took them to the West Seattle Y.M.C.A. "Just for fun." By the time they were in ninth grade, they were "practicing hard." Under the supervision of their coach, Fred Sato, they began serious Judo, as each has his own friends. Jay and Fred assist their father in the 1978 tournament in Hawaii and Jay won first place and "best technique" in the tournament. The Demise twins earned their black belts in the high school national finals in Kent, Wash., in 1978. In this country, there isn't anyone to practice with. Most people quit Judo after high school, because there is no future in it. In Canada there is more interest, making it possible to practice every day, according to Jay.

Japan still leads the world in Judo. Their champions are promised teaching positions.

The Demise brothers find that being a twin has both advantages and disadvantages. Having someone to train with helps, but as one progresses higher, the others push harder to catch up. Together they pushed each other all the way to the championship.

The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. Jay enjoys tennis, golf, and while Fred plays basketball, Jay explained that friends and family have no trouble telling them apart.

The recipients of scholarships provided by the Board of Trustees at Highline Community College were announced at the Feb. 21 Board of Trustees meeting.

The scholarships, provided by the Washington Mutual Savings Bank, were awarded to five honors students. The grants amounted to $400 per student and will be used for tuition and book expenses.

The winners were: John Holtun, Jennifer Meier, Debra Baumgartner, Linda Jones and Constance Smith. A selection committee, headed by Joan Fedor, coordinator of the Honors Scholarship Program at HCC, examined the qualifications of the many applicants.

Holtun, a graduate of Weatherwax High School in Aberdeen, will be attending the University of Washington where he will pursue a career in medicine, according to Fedor.

Maine graduate of John F. Kennedy High School, she is skilled in the French and German languages and interested in a French career. She is interested in a business career.

Baumgartner is a graduate of University of Oregon and is studying for a degree in interior design and will attend Seattle University after graduation from HCC. She would someday like to operate her own business, said Fedor.

Both twins are Business Transfer students.

The twins started Judo lessons at the age of 10 when their father, James Demise, took them to the West Seattle Y.M.C.A. "Just for fun." By the time they were in ninth grade, they were "practicing hard." Under the supervision of their coach, Fred Sato, they began serious Judo, as each has his own friends. Jay and Fred assist their father in the 1978 tournament in Hawaii and Jay won first place and "best technique" in the tournament. The Demise twins earned their black belts in the high school national finals in Kent, Wash., in 1978. In this country, there isn't anyone to practice with. Most people quit Judo after high school, because there is no future in it. In Canada there is more interest, making it possible to practice every day, according to Jay.

Japan still leads the world in Judo. Their champions are promised teaching positions.

The Demise brothers find that being a twin has both advantages and disadvantages. Having someone to train with helps, but as one progresses higher, the others push harder to catch up. Together they pushed each other all the way to the championship.

The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. Jay enjoys tennis, golf, and while Fred plays basketball, Jay explained that friends and family have no trouble telling them apart.

Accompanying Holtun, a graduate of Weatherwax High School in Aberdeen, will be attending the University of Washington where he will pursue a career in medicine, according to Fedor.

Maine graduate of John F. Kennedy High School, she is skilled in the French and German languages and interested in a French career. She is interested in a business career.

Baumgartner is a graduate of University of Oregon and is studying for a degree in interior design and will attend Seattle University after graduation from HCC. She would someday like to operate her own business, said Fedor.

Both twins are Business Transfer students.

The recipients of scholarships provided by the Board of Trustees at Highline Community College were announced at the Feb. 21 Board of Trustees meeting.

The scholarships, provided by the Washington Mutual Savings Bank, were awarded to five honors students. The grants amounted to $400 per student and will be used for tuition and book expenses.

The winners were: John Holtun, Jennifer Meier, Debra Baumgartner, Linda Jones and Constance Smith. A selection committee, headed by Joan Fedor, coordinator of the Honors Scholarship Program at HCC, examined the qualifications of the many applicants.

Holtun, a graduate of Weatherwax High School in Aberdeen, will be attending the University of Washington where he will pursue a career in medicine, according to Fedor.

Maine graduate of John F. Kennedy High School, she is skilled in the French and German languages and interested in a French career. She is interested in a business career.

Baumgartner is a graduate of University of Oregon and is studying for a degree in interior design and will attend Seattle University after graduation from HCC. She would someday like to operate her own business, said Fedor.

Both twins are Business Transfer students.

The recipients of scholarships provided by the Board of Trustees at Highline Community College were announced at the Feb. 21 Board of Trustees meeting.

The scholarships, provided by the Washington Mutual Savings Bank, were awarded to five honors students. The grants amounted to $400 per student and will be used for tuition and book expenses.

The winners were: John Holtun, Jennifer Meier, Debra Baumgartner, Linda Jones and Constance Smith. A selection committee, headed by Joan Fedor, coordinator of the Honors Scholarship Program at HCC, examined the qualifications of the many applicants.

Holtun, a graduate of Weatherwax High School in Aberdeen, will be attending the University of Washington where he will pursue a career in medicine, according to Fedor.

Maine graduate of John F. Kennedy High School, she is skilled in the French and German languages and interested in a French career. She is interested in a business career.

Baumgartner is a graduate of University of Oregon and is studying for a degree in interior design and will attend Seattle University after graduation from HCC. She would someday like to operate her own business, said Fedor.

Both twins are Business Transfer students.

At least three people from each state are allowed to enter the national competition. They must have a brown belt or higher. The top three or four finalists are given on-the-spot promotions to black belt status.

The Demise twins earned their black belts in the high school national finals in Kent, Wash., in 1978. In this country, there isn't anyone to practice with. Most people quit Judo after high school, because there is no future in it. In Canada there is more interest, making it possible to practice every day, according to Jay.

Japan still leads the world in Judo. Their champions are promised teaching positions.

The Demise brothers find that being a twin has both advantages and disadvantages. Having someone to train with helps, but as one progresses higher, the others push harder to catch up. Together they pushed each other all the way to the championship.

The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. Jay enjoys tennis, golf, and while Fred plays basketball, Jay explained that friends and family have no trouble telling them apart.

At least three people from each state are allowed to enter the national competition. They must have a brown belt or higher. The top three or four finalists are given on-the-spot promotions to black belt status.

The Demise twins earned their black belts in the high school national finals in Kent, Wash., in 1978. In this country, there isn't anyone to practice with. Most people quit Judo after high school, because there is no future in it. In Canada there is more interest, making it possible to practice every day, according to Jay.

Japan still leads the world in Judo. Their champions are promised teaching positions.

The Demise brothers find that being a twin has both advantages and disadvantages. Having someone to train with helps, but as one progresses higher, the others push harder to catch up. Together they pushed each other all the way to the championship.

The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. The only time they are together is in Judo, as each has his own friends. Jay enjoys tennis, golf, and while Fred plays basketball, Jay explained that friends and family have no trouble telling them apart.
Dear Editor,
In response to your article “Highline athletes call in Title IX storm,” I suggest that Mr. Connanoughy has a lot of nerve in stating that: “our understanding of athletics and women’s athletics is still too limited.”

This is pure and simple ignorance. The Athletic Department is well known for its dedication to the advancement of women’s athletics. The reason great increases were made this year in the budget for women’s sports was because there was a Title IX complaint being filed, which would have brought an investigation to the campus.

In Mr. Connanoughy’s own area of track and field, the money in the budget is claimed to be for both men and women. However, instead of sides of the coin in the emotional level of coaching...
The Winter Olympics in Lake Placid have quickly come and gone, at least for another four years. And yet in that brief moment, we saw the world of winter sports at its best.

One of the more exciting events was downhill skiing, with the downhill race, the giant slalom and the slalom.

We saw the world's best skiers like Ingemar Stenmark, Andreas Wenzel, and Phil Mahre racing down the slopes at neck-breaking speeds, risking everything for the gold.

The pace was fast—very fast—and difficult.

The speed and excitement that most people will tell you they think of when they think of skiing. In fact, just about everyone will agree. But what about a peaceful evening on the slopes?

Peaceful you say? Yes, peaceful. Quietly gliding over the snow, perhaps through trees, without the noisy crowds.

Weeknights are the best times to find this kind of atmosphere since most skiers are either in school or work. It seems it's just too much for most to ski at night and then try to get up in the morning.

But if you can make it, I would strongly recommend it. It is so different not having to wait in long lines, not worrying whether a fellow skier is going to come crashing down upon your behind. It's only the snow beneath your skis and you.

Of course, night skiing can also be very exciting, even more so than day skiing. Shadowed slopes provide for a daring, exciting run—never really knowing what is ahead.

You can also try your hand on the paths, skiing through dimly-lit woods, where your skill as a skier is thoroughly tested. I, however, prefer the less daring, quieter runs.

A quiet run at night smooths the nerves and lets you enjoy the feeling of skiing without all the pressures and all the crowds.

Night skiing—the quiet side of a fast and exciting sport.

Story and photos by Brian Morris.
Anonymous, confusion and 'All That Jazz'

"All That Jazz" starring Roy Scheider, Dustin Hoffman, Leland Palmer, Ann Reinking and Ben Vereen is currently showing at the King Cinema at Sixth and Blanchard in Seattle. It is rated R because of language and nudity.

The Twentieth Century-Fox and Columbia Pictures film has been nominated for nine academy awards including best picture and best original screenplay. Scheider was nominated for best actor and Bob Fosse for best director by Rod Weeks.

The character Joe Gideon lives in a dream world. The film director/roadie-musician/chorographer's self was played by John Cazale, who died this year.

"I sometimes don't know what the film's about, and the truth begins," he says, "I walk through a moment of reflection between the violent life and death of show business.

"That's it," said about his role, and an acceptable, well-acted performance. The motion picture, which has been nominated for an academy award for best film of 1979 by the Popular Film Critics Association, was released on Dec. 19. (Dec. 19)

Critics have condemned Fosse for this, but regardless of his motives, All That Jazz is an exceptional film. Fosse is very clever, keeping the viewer interested and, at times, shocked at what could have been a very dull performance.

The director utilizes flashbacks, re-working motifs, and superimpositions of scenes at one time. It is very similar to Woody Allen's Annie Hall in that it pits Gideon back into scenes he's already lived in, for the most part, does so with relevant transitions.

All That Jazz, however, is a bit confusing at times. And you will probably come out of the theatre feeling mesmerized, unless perhaps your per conceptions of Fosse's intended message are overshadowed by your enjoyment of the grand paintings numbers and the monumental acts, which are important parts of the film's picture.

Don't count on it, though.

The top show in Gideon's dream at the end deals with death. In fact the movie, if short, is probably either a mixed-up montage of Gideon's life flashing before his eyes or a musical romance and death Angeline's (Jessica Lange) evaluation of the dancer's male lifestyle.

Whether it is one of the other, death is definitely the theme and show business definitely is the cause of his death.

Ironically, All That Jazz's co-writer-producer Robert Alan Arthor and executive producer Daniel Melnick died during the movie's production, so Fosse probably would just as soon forget.

Actor, dancer Ben Vereen co-stars in the film as O'Connor, a TV entertainer who's featured in Gideon's dream.

For the grand finale, Vereen is joined by Leland Palmer and Enver Hoxha. Gideon's former wife and daughter and Ann Reinking. Gideon's current girl friend, is in a melee of dances and songs emphasizing Gideon's death.

Reinking, in particular, is outstanding in her role. The expert dancer-proves she is also a sensitive, mature actress.

Her strong complements Scheider's character well.

Scheider's weak parts have included the police chief in Jnr and Ann and Fosse's intended messages, who is a master of the wild, but unfortunately, is a surprisingly believable in his portrayal of the dynamic Gideon.

His academy award nomination for best actor is richly deserved.

Brooks and Watton spark sparse HCC crowd

by Melodie Steiger and Craig Steed

A small crowd of Highline College students were treated to a private performance in the Lecture Hall on Feb. 21 as Brooks and Watton, singers and guitarists, displayed their agreeable, laid-back musical style.

Feb. 21 as Brooks and Watton, singers and guitarists, displayed their agreeable, laid-back musical style.

The director utilizes flashbacks, re-working motifs, and superimpositions of scenes at one time. It is very similar to Woody Allen's Annie Hall in that it pits Gideon back into scenes he's already lived in, for the most part, does so with relevant transitions.

All That Jazz, however, is a bit confusing at times. And you will probably come out of the theatre feeling mesmerized, unless perhaps your per conceptions of Fosse's intended message are overshadowed by your enjoyment of the grand paintings numbers and the monumental acts, which are important parts of the film's picture.

Don't count on it, though.

The top show in Gideon's dream at the end deals with death. In fact the movie, if short, is probably either a mixed-up montage of Gideon's life flashing before his eyes or a musical romance and death Angeline's (Jessica Lange) evaluation of the dancer's male lifestyle.

Whether it is one of the other, death is definitely the theme and show business definitely is the cause of his death.

Ironically, All That Jazz's co-writer-producer Robert Alan Arthor and executive producer Daniel Melnick died during the movie's production, so Fosse probably would just as soon forget.

Actor, dancer Ben Vereen co-stars in the film as O'Connor, a TV entertainer who's featured in Gideon's dream.

For the grand finale, Vereen is joined by Leland Palmer and Enver Hoxha. Gideon's former wife and daughter and Ann Reinking. Gideon's current girl friend, is in a melee of dances and songs emphasizing Gideon's death.

Reinking, in particular, is outstanding in her role. The expert dancer-proves she is also a sensitive, mature actress.

Her strong complements Scheider's character well.

Scheider's weak parts have included the police chief in Jnr and Ann and Fosse's intended messages, who is a master of the wild, but unfortunately, is a surprisingly believable in his portrayal of the dynamic Gideon.

His academy award nomination for best actor is richly deserved.

Brooks and Watton spark sparse HCC crowd

by Melodie Steiger and Craig Steed

A small crowd of Highline College students were treated to a private performance in the Lecture Hall on Feb. 21 as Brooks and Watton, singers and guitarists, displayed their agreeable, laid-back musical style.

The director utilizes flashbacks, re-working motifs, and superimpositions of scenes at one time. It is very similar to Woody Allen's Annie Hall in that it pits Gideon back into scenes he's already lived in, for the most part, does so with relevant transitions.

All That Jazz, however, is a bit confusing at times. And you will probably come out of the theatre feeling mesmerized, unless perhaps your per conceptions of Fosse's intended message are overshadowed by your enjoyment of the grand paintings numbers and the monumental acts, which are important parts of the film's picture.

Don't count on it, though.

The top show in Gideon's dream at the end deals with death. In fact the movie, if short, is probably either a mixed-up montage of Gideon's life flashing before his eyes or a musical romance and death Angeline's (Jessica Lange) evaluation of the dancer's male lifestyle.

Whether it is one of the other, death is definitely the theme and show business definitely is the cause of his death.

Ironically, All That Jazz's co-writer-producer Robert Alan Arthor and executive producer Daniel Melnick died during the movie's production, so Fosse probably would just as soon forget.

Actor, dancer Ben Vereen co-stars in the film as O'Connor, a TV entertainer who's featured in Gideon's dream.

For the grand finale, Vereen is joined by Leland Palmer and Enver Hoxha. Gideon's former wife and daughter and Ann Reinking. Gideon's current girl friend, is in a melee of dances and songs emphasizing Gideon's death.

Reinking, in particular, is outstanding in her role. The expert dancer-proves she is also a sensitive, mature actress.

Her strong complements Scheider's character well.

Scheider's weak parts have included the police chief in Jnr and Ann and Fosse's intended messages, who is a master of the wild, but unfortunately, is a surprisingly believable in his portrayal of the dynamic Gideon.

His academy award nomination for best actor is richly deserved.

Brooks and Watton spark sparse HCC crowd

by Melodie Steiger and Craig Steed

A small crowd of Highline College students were treated to a private performance in the Lecture Hall on Feb. 21 as Brooks and Watton, singers and guitarists, displayed their agreeable, laid-back musical style.

The director utilizes flashbacks, re-working motifs, and superimpositions of scenes at one time. It is very similar to Woody Allen's Annie Hall in that it pits Gideon back into scenes he's already lived in, for the most part, does so with relevant transitions.

All That Jazz, however, is a bit confusing at times. And you will probably come out of the theatre feeling mesmerized, unless perhaps your per conceptions of Fosse's intended message are overshadowed by your enjoyment of the grand paintings numbers and the monumental acts, which are important parts of the film's picture.

Don't count on it, though.

The top show in Gideon's dream at the end deals with death. In fact the movie, if short, is probably either a mixed-up montage of Gideon's life flashing before his eyes or a musical romance and death Angeline's (Jessica Lange) evaluation of the dancer's male lifestyle.

Whether it is one of the other, death is definitely the theme and show business definitely is the cause of his death.

Ironically, All That Jazz's co-writer-producer Robert Alan Arthor and executive producer Daniel Melnick died during the movie's production, so Fosse probably would just as soon forget.

Actor, dancer Ben Vereen co-stars in the film as O'Connor, a TV entertainer who's featured in Gideon's dream.

For the grand finale, Vereen is joined by Leland Palmer and Enver Hoxha. Gideon's former wife and daughter and Ann Reinking. Gideon's current girl friend, is in a melee of dances and songs emphasizing Gideon's death.

Reinking, in particular, is outstanding in her role. The expert dancer-proves she is also a sensitive, mature actress.

Her strong complements Scheider's character well.

Scheider's weak parts have included the police chief in Jnr and Ann and Fosse's intended messages, who is a master of the wild, but unfortunately, is a surprisingly believable in his portrayal of the dynamic Gideon.

His academy award nomination for best actor is richly deserved.

Brooks and Watton spark sparse HCC crowd

by Melodie Steiger and Craig Steed

A small crowd of Highline College students were treated to a private performance in the Lecture Hall on Feb. 21 as Brooks and Watton, singers and guitarists, displayed their agreeable, laid-back musical style.

The director utilizes flashbacks, re-working motifs, and superimpositions of scenes at one time. It is very similar to Woody Allen's Annie Hall in that it pits Gideon back into scenes he's already lived in, for the most part, does so with relevant transitions.

All That Jazz, however, is a bit confusing at times. And you will probably come out of the theatre feeling mesmerized, unless perhaps your per conceptions of Fosse's intended message are overshadowed by your enjoyment of the grand paintings numbers and the monumental acts, which are important parts of the film's picture.

Don't count on it, though.

The top show in Gideon's dream at the end deals with death. In fact the movie, if short, is probably either a mixed-up montage of Gideon's life flashing before his eyes or a musical romance and death Angeline's (Jessica Lange) evaluation of the dancer's male lifestyle.

Whether it is one of the other, death is definitely the theme and show business definitely is the cause of his death.

Ironically, All That Jazz's co-writer-producer Robert Alan Arthor and executive producer Daniel Melnick died during the movie's production, so Fosse probably would just as soon forget.

Actor, dancer Ben Vereen co-stars in the film as O'Connor, a TV entertainer who's featured in Gideon's dream.

For the grand finale, Vereen is joined by Leland Palmer and Enver Hoxha. Gideon's former wife and daughter and Ann Reinking. Gideon's current girl friend, is in a melee of dances and songs emphasizing Gideon's death.

Reinking, in particular, is outstanding in her role. The expert dancer-proves she is also a sensitive, mature actress.

Her strong complements Scheider's character well.

Scheider's weak parts have included the police chief in Jnr and Ann and Fosse's intended messages, who is a master of the wild, but unfortunately, is a surprisingly believable in his portrayal of the dynamic Gideon.

His academy award nomination for best actor is richly deserved.
Christopher Donley is a man of many faces

by Annabel Staab

Christopher Donley is a man of many faces. You've never seen him on camera with a different face, but you may have seen him on stage of some of Highline Community College's theatre productions.

Donley feels that "make-up helps in the physical nature of the character. 'Make-up technique is an extension of the character and his physical nature,'" stated Donley.

"Make-up work helps enormously. If you are careful and in tune with your character's development, it's an interesting phenomena," he said. "It goes both ways. If your character is good your make-up is good," Donley added.

Donley first became interested in drama in high school where he played the part of Pagli in Oliver, and also the part of Tulsie in Gypsy. "When Donley was in high school he wasn't as involved in the theater as he is now. "I wasn't a theater person until part of Tulsa in coming to Highline," said Donley.

"Any novel has some autobiographical stuff in it. Some of the things in the book have feelings of my childhood and then changed slightly," Wong said.

Wong had much research in preparation for his book. He delved into accounts of Chinese life in the 1870's and after the completion of the Transcontinental Railroad, when thousands of Chinese were set free to form their own communities.

He spoke of Angel Island, located in San Francisco Bay. The Island was the immigration and detention, point for Chinese coming into the U.S. Some of them were here for as long as three years.

"There are no real histories about Chinese Americans written from their point of view. By the time most of them that are around now were written, they were so dry that no one could read them," Wong commented.

Wong is not only a published author, but he is also a drag racer.

"I like drag racing because you either win or lose in 12 seconds. Novels take years. When I get frustrated with my book, I go tank with my car," he said.

Wong is presently working on his second novel, which will be published by the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company. He says that it will be something like a "Chinese Roots."
Women cagers earn tourney spot

by Doug Helmholtz

Highline's women cagers end their season Feb. 27, owning the second place position by securing a spot for the post-season tournament in Wenatchee, March 9.

The Birds had a season record of 16-7, and a league record of 11-2 going into their Feb. 23 game against Clark Community College, at Clark.

But Highline's league record changed to 11-3, after their rallying efforts put them on the losing end of the 71-69 final.

The Birds were down 46-67 with less than one minute left in their game, when they started a scoring streak that put them ahead, 69-67, when Elly Brugga stole a pass and put it in with only 20 seconds left.

With 14 seconds remaining, Clark regained the lead, 70-69, when a foul sent them to the free throw line with a one and one situation.

Beck Suehr took the following inbound pass and dribbled down court, but as she set up for a shot with seven seconds left, she was called for traveling and Clark in possession of the ball.

The Birds fouled Clark after their inbound pass, and with only one tick left, Clark went to the free throw line with a one and one situation.

They made the first one, but missed the second, so Highline got the ball out of bounds.

"With one second left we threw the ball down court as far as possible, to try and get a final shot, but just couldn't get it," Bolinger stated.

Highline led most of the game, and played good at times, but Bolinger said "we didn't play consistently, and if we and played better in our flat spots we could have won the game."

But the closeness of the game reassured Bolinger that they definitely have a chance at Wenatchee.

The Birds won one game left against Lower Columbia, and Bolinger doesn't expect it to be easy.

"Lower Columbia has a chance for the third place position, which would put them in a play-off game to determine who will go to the tournament," stated Bolinger, "so they'll be playing all out with that in mind."

Although it won't be an easy game, Bolinger said his team "is very determined to make it."

"We want to play everyone and use this context as a springboard for the tournament," Highline's final series of home games started with a disappointing loss to Clark CC on Feb. 6, when the Chicklettes pilled off an 87-75 win.

The win kept Clark in a solid first place position in the Coastal Division.

The Birds bounced back and took all three of their remaining home games, with wins against Yakima, 72-68, and Centralia, 74-69, which they beat them on Feb. 9, 87-66.

Then they lost Grays Harbor 64-13, on Feb. 13.

The T-Birds locked up their second spot in the Coastal Division when they defeated Olympic, 76-61, on Feb. 16, which sent the last home game this year to its loss.

On Feb. 20, the Birds traveled to Centralia to play the first of their final three games for the 1979-80 season, and walked away with another win, 64-67.

This latest victory once again put them on a winning streak going into a game with Clark.

Coach Dale Bolinger blamed the Feb. 2 loss on his team's shooting percentage.

"When only 31 of 99 shots find the hoop, you can't expect to win," stated Bolinger.

The Birds shot a 34 per cent from the field, compared to Clark's 60 per cent, but Bolinger said his team outplayed their opponent on the floor.

"We were working the ball around well and our shot selection was good, but they just weren't going in," Bolinger stated.

In evaluating his team's four game win streak, Bolinger said he's pleased with the overall play, "but there's no way you can really evaluate a game that ends up 64-13."

"I'm proud of the way the girls maintained their composure and treated the Grays Harbor team with respect, in a massacre win, it's something to be a good woman, because it's easy to start laughing and joking around," he said.

He expects that neither of the two remaining contests will be easy, but "I'm going to play everyone on the team and use the games to prepare for the A.A.C.C. post-season tournament," stated Bolinger.

Highline's first game in the tournament will put them up against the number two representative from the Puget Sound Division, which Bolinger guesses is most likely to be either Green River or Skagit Valley.

Bolinger said he thinks Clark has a good chance to take the tournament because they got second place last year, and besides having all around good team, they have the experience of playing in a championship game and know what the pressures are like.

"Even though we won't go in as a favorite," Bolinger said, "we have just as good of a chance as any other team as long as we get a final shot, because the ball.

"Highline has played most all the teams that are invited to the tournament in league play, so we pretty much know what they do," said team captain Cindy Sturtz.

"But through the season, we've had our ups and downs games," Sturtz said, "and like all teams going to Wenatchee, we're hoping to win. I just hope we play like we do in our up games."

Swimmers end season with best record in state

by Faye Harold

The Highline College swimming team finished the 1979-1980 season with the best record of any community college in the state.

The team's final record of 4-2 for the women swimmers and 5-1 for the men, put the team in the number one position, despite two cancellations of meets against Fort Steilacoom Community College, who came in fourth.

At the meet, Mark Ammonset set a new HCC varsity record of 4:24.21 in the 400 yard individual medley.

Jamie Durham won two of her events, turning in times of 39.8 in the 100-yard freestyle and 1:06.5 in the 100-yard individual medley.

Swimming Coach Andy Hathaway started the championships last year to aid small colleges in their search for post-season meets.

"This year the rest of the schools sent their women's teams to the University of Montana and their men's teams to the University of Washington," said Hathaway.

"I don't feel that there is any reason to split the teams up like that," he went on to say.

He feels that the meet in its second year has "turned into a nice meet," and he hopes that it will continue to attract more schools.

The championships have grown from two schools last year - Portland CC and Highline - to the four schools that competed this year and will grow even more next year with the addition of Whitman College and Western Washington State College.

Hathaway is looking forward to the Regional Championships which will be held March 7, 8, and 9 at Bremerton, Ore.

The T-Birds will send five representatives to Bremerton - Mark Ammonset, Jon Rice, Randy Terlikker, Steve Ingraham, and Jamie Durham.

"Last year, we were 19th out of 43 teams," Hathaway said, "but we should do much better this year."

"Mark Ammonset should really do well at the meet," he said. "He should reset all the records he set this season."

This is the mental meet of the year for him and he really wants to make a strong showing."

Jamie Durham is also expected to do well at the Regionals.

Durham returned to swimming this quarter after a five year lay-off from the sport.

When she was 15, Durham was a national level competitor, and at Highline she has been making very strong progress according to Hathaway.

Looking forward to next year, Hathaway feels that the recruiting is going well.

"We should have a stronger group as a whole next year, especially in championship meets," stated Hathaway.

Hathaway feels that right now, the team is good at dual meets but not as good at championship meets because in the latter meets they are competing under different rules.

Adding more depth to next season's squad is seen as one way to improve the team's competitiveness in future post-season contests.

Looking forward this season, Jodie Hartly, who will be returning to the women's squad next year, enjoyed swimming.

"We have a good time here," she said. "We don't compete against each other except for training purposes."

"We just have fun," Hartly concluded.

Hathaway's 1979-79 team got only four places honored in their division, and recognizing invitations to Wenatchee, so no matter what the outcome of this year's tournament, the 1979-80 Birds have proven to be a respectable team, that opponents are going to have to watch out for.
Bonnie Hendricks

The one-woman cross country team

by Doug Hale

Highline Community College's lone female distance runner, Bonnie Hendricks, will not be alone for long.

"Plans are to start recruiting women so that next year we will have a viable women's cross country team," announced Athletic Director Don McConnaughey.

Hendricks began her distance work in ninth grade. It wasn't until she was a senior at Highline High School that she began turning out for both cross country and track.

"My track really improved because of cross country and the long distance running involved with it," said Hendricks.

"I think that I'll do better in track than I did in cross country this year," said Hendricks, "because I was just starting to get in shape at the end of cross country, and I did a lot more winter training this year than I've done before."

In past track seasons Hendricks has run the quarter-mile and half-mile, but feels that these were the wrong events for her. She says that because of her distance running she can compete better in the two-mile, and Head Track Coach Charles Cusin agrees.

"We will be taking Bonnie with us to the meet in Idaho and she will run in the two-mile," said Cusin.

Although Hendricks was the only woman on the cross country team, and is one of few on the track team, she is not discouraged by this.

"I did a lot of recruiting trying to get women to come here, and I think next year something will be done and we will have a women's team. I plan to come back next year even if we don't have a women's team," said Hendricks.

A complete women's cross country team is not possible right now, according to McConnaughey.

"Hendricks would like to see an assistant coach to help out Cusin and Tom Frank. "I think we should get an assistant that would specialize in women's track," commented Hendricks.

McConnaughey said that if enough girls turn out, then an assistant coach will be hired.

"My first choice would be a woman," said McConnaughey, "but if we did get an assistant the best way to coach the squad would be to break down the team into three groups: sprinters, distance runners, and jumpers and throwers."

Highline College's Bonnie Hendrick, out of Highline High School, is the Thunderbirds' only female cross country competitor. Staff photo by Barry Hocken

Men cagers end season with even record

by Tim Kelly

Evening their Coastal League record at 6-6 with a Feb. 20 win over Peninsula, 103-96, the Highline College men's basketball team finished the season with a 16-10 overall tally.

The T-birds ended up in fourth place in the league, behind Lower Columbia, 11-1; Centralia, 10-2; and Grays Harbor, 8-4; Clerk, Olympic, and Peninsula followed HTC in the standings.

The fourth-place finish leaves the Birds out of the state tournament. Only the top three teams go to the tourney.

"We lost four of our first six league games," said Coach Fred Harrison. "That's a terrible hole to come out of."

Highline's bounceback reversed their early problems by winning four of their last six games, giving the team its 6-6 league record.

At 6 with Grays Harbor could have come about, but Highline lost to Centralia, 77-54 on Feb. 13, and dropped a 100-83 decision to Lower Columbia on Feb. 16 before beating Peninsula.

In the Centralia game, Terrell Landry came up with 10 points and nine rebounds; Scott Armstrong was team high with 15 points, and Mike Lopez added 11. Steve Pudits paced the Trailblazers with 20 points. At one point during their loss to league champion Lower Columbia, the T-birds trailed by 30 points but got on a good roll to cut the deficit to 12 in the second half.

Landry led the team with 28 points. He and Armstrong each had nine boards. The Red Devils had five players with 12 or more points; Bill Dunlap led the pack with 22.

Help keep Red Cross ready.
Anti-nuclear group beginning at Highline

by Aaron De Anda

An anti-nuclear energy group is forming at Highline Community College. Fred Bowen, an HCC student, is coordinating the member drive.

"I was in Asia with a military operation, " he said, "and I became more aware of the dangers of nuclear energy. So I began talking to my friends about their views on nuclear energy. I found that many of them had never considered the issues."

Bowen has never been affiliated with an anti-nuclear group, but he has agreed with their position for about ten years.

"I realized that nuclear energy is not the solution to our energy problems, " he said. "We need to explore alternative sources, such as solar and wind energy."

Bowen believes that the government should begin phasing out nuclear energy and make it a priority to develop alternative sources.

"I support the group's position, " he said. "We need to take action now to protect the environment and our future generations."

The group is planning to hold a meeting on Tuesday and Thursday, from 11-1 in Building 24410-Military Road, Kent, WA 98031.

Spring brings changes, charges

Glenna Carter

Glenna Carter recently led the Y-honds to a 10-9 victory over the Othello Blue Jays.

For five years, Carter has been an integral part of the team's success. She has been a consistent scorer and has helped lead the team to several championships.

"I'm glad I had my Webster's dictionary handy to decipher what appears to be a cryptic treatise on apathy below your credence, " she said. "It's vaguely obvious what your point is. You tend to color your ambiguity and make it unclear."

In your editorial you say that retaliation is "the subtle predecessor of resentment." That befuddles me. Even if you say that retaliation is a response to resentment, it doesn't explain why it occurs.

I'm sure that there are people who retaliate for reasons of obfuscation, so I retaliate by sending this letter. I hope you get it?"

Dear Ed,

"Spring brings changes, charges," he said. "Better luck next time."

Yup. Ed.

Spring brings changes, charges

Glenna Carter

Glenna Carter recently led the Y-honds to a 10-9 victory over the Othello Blue Jays.

For five years, Carter has been an integral part of the team's success. She has been a consistent scorer and has helped lead the team to several championships.

"I'm glad I had my Webster's dictionary handy to decipher what appears to be a cryptic treatise on apathy below your credence, " she said. "It's vaguely obvious what your point is. You tend to color your ambiguity and make it unclear."

In your editorial you say that retaliation is "the subtle predecessor of resentment." That befuddles me. Even if you say that retaliation is a response to resentment, it doesn't explain why it occurs.

I'm sure that there are people who retaliate for reasons of obfuscation, so I retaliate by sending this letter. I hope you get it?"

Dear Ed,

"Spring brings changes, charges," he said. "Better luck next time."

Yup. Ed.

Spring brings changes, charges

Glenna Carter

Glenna Carter recently led the Y-honds to a 10-9 victory over the Othello Blue Jays.

For five years, Carter has been an integral part of the team's success. She has been a consistent scorer and has helped lead the team to several championships.

"I'm glad I had my Webster's dictionary handy to decipher what appears to be a cryptic treatise on apathy below your credence, " she said. "It's vaguely obvious what your point is. You tend to color your ambiguity and make it unclear."

In your editorial you say that retaliation is "the subtle predecessor of resentment." That befuddles me. Even if you say that retaliation is a response to resentment, it doesn't explain why it occurs.

I'm sure that there are people who retaliate for reasons of obfuscation, so I retaliate by sending this letter. I hope you get it?"

Dear Ed,

"Spring brings changes, charges," he said. "Better luck next time."

Yup. Ed.

Spring brings changes, charges

Glenna Carter

Glenna Carter recently led the Y-honds to a 10-9 victory over the Othello Blue Jays.

For five years, Carter has been an integral part of the team's success. She has been a consistent scorer and has helped lead the team to several championships.

"I'm glad I had my Webster's dictionary handy to decipher what appears to be a cryptic treatise on apathy below your credence, " she said. "It's vaguely obvious what your point is. You tend to color your ambiguity and make it unclear."

In your editorial you say that retaliation is "the subtle predecessor of resentment." That befuddles me. Even if you say that retaliation is a response to resentment, it doesn't explain why it occurs.

I'm sure that there are people who retaliate for reasons of obfuscation, so I retaliate by sending this letter. I hope you get it?"

Dear Ed,

"Spring brings changes, charges," he said. "Better luck next time."

Yup. Ed.

Spring brings changes, charges

Glenna Carter

Glenna Carter recently led the Y-honds to a 10-9 victory over the Othello Blue Jays.

For five years, Carter has been an integral part of the team's success. She has been a consistent scorer and has helped lead the team to several championships.

"I'm glad I had my Webster's dictionary handy to decipher what appears to be a cryptic treatise on apathy below your credence, " she said. "It's vaguely obvious what your point is. You tend to color your ambiguity and make it unclear."

In your editorial you say that retaliation is "the subtle predecessor of resentment." That befuddles me. Even if you say that retaliation is a response to resentment, it doesn't explain why it occurs.

I'm sure that there are people who retaliate for reasons of obfuscation, so I retaliate by sending this letter. I hope you get it?"

Dear Ed,

"Spring brings changes, charges," he said. "Better luck next time."

Yup. Ed.

Spring brings changes, charges

Glenna Carter

Glenna Carter recently led the Y-honds to a 10-9 victory over the Othello Blue Jays.

For five years, Carter has been an integral part of the team's success. She has been a consistent scorer and has helped lead the team to several championships.

"I'm glad I had my Webster's dictionary handy to decipher what appears to be a cryptic treatise on apathy below your credence, " she said. "It's vaguely obvious what your point is. You tend to color your ambiguity and make it unclear."

In your editorial you say that retali