Campus needs repair

By BETSEY SCHUBERT

Fire construction, changing building use and quality of public offices have combined to create a new set of problems for the campus. Several buildings are in need of maintenance and repairs, according to the Facilities Department which oversees this area.

According to the Facilities Department of the College, some of the problems with campus buildings are very severe. For example, asbestos is being removed from buildings. The primary drinking fountains are also a concern, as they are located near some occupied buildings with asbestos. The buildings are being maintained by the university, and periodic inspections are being conducted.

In addition, lighting and plumbing are also of concern. The campus is not equipped with contemporary lighting fixtures which are necessary for safety. Furthermore, lighting in some buildings is not available. The campus heating and ventilation system is also a problem, as it is being repaired to maintain constant temperatures. The heating system is located under the construction site, and many current faults can be traced to the original installation.

OFFICIAL APATHY

Campus Lighting has recently been given a few points in the state capital. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has also been examining the problems with campus lighting. The Commission is looking at the state capital and a comparison of its facilities with those of the College. The Commission has also been examining the problems with the campus heating system. As it is not a state capital, the College is not required to report its findings to the Commission.

Various solutions are being considered to address the problem. One method is to increase the number of lighting fixtures in the buildings. However, the costs are not feasible in some cases, and there may be a need to build more lighting fixtures in the buildings. The facilities department is also examining the possibility of using solar power as an alternative source of energy.

OTHER PROBLEMS

As a whole, facilities management is essential for the well-being of the campus and its occupants. The campus heating system needs to be evaluated and upgraded to prevent further maintenance issues. The facilities department is working on solutions to address the problem, and the College is committed to improving its facilities.
The security department reminds students, staff, and faculty that vehicles may be impounded for blocking walkways, fire lanes, sidewalks, and blocked areas. The college may also impound vehicles if they or their occupants remain unattended.

Call pool permits will be issued by the campus security office when 8 or more people are dining together. This permit is transferable only among the registered members of the pool.

The Health Services Office, in Bldg. 9, will hold a large collection of 245 napkins with health topics such as weight loss and alcoholism. A health library is also available for use by all students.

According to Mary Lou Holland, director of health services, the most common health problem for students on campus are upper respiratory infections. If you have a cold, take advantage of the services offered and visit health services in Bldg. 4.

The Philadelphia String Quartet will be performing in Bldg. 7 at 7:30 p.m. on the 12th of February. You can pick up a ticket at the bookstore or at the door for $35 per student, $3 per staff member or $1 per citizen.

On February 10th the group Oceana will perform at the HJC dance. The dance will go from 10:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. The cost will be $25 with students and $44 without.

The next in the series of Career Orientation Seminars are "Managing Anger More Effectively within the Work Environment" on February 8 and "Communicating in a Supportive Manner" on February 15. These seminars are held from 7 to 10 a.m. at the Health and Welfare Center.

The news in the series of Career Orientation Seminars are "Managing Anger More Effectively within the Work Environment" on February 8 and "Communicating in a Supportive Manner" on February 15. These seminars are held from 7 to 10 a.m. at the Health and Welfare Center.

The next two Wednesdays, February 8 and 15, movies will be featured in Bldg. 8. The times will be 1:30 and 7:00 p.m. The cost is $2.50 for those under the age of 2 and 55+ for everyone else. The February 8th film is "Science, the Truth," and the February 15th film is "The Recruiters."

Students interested in joining the new HCC Computer Club are invited to attend the first formal meeting Monday, Feb. 4, at 1 p.m. in the Cotter Hall, building 22. More information may be obtained from Scott Wall, president, daily in the lab at 9 a.m.

Attention skiers: The Highline College Recreation Committee is making available a transportation lift ticket package for Ainsworth and the S.R. 99A area. Transportation and lift tickets will cost $24.50 per person. The dates will be Feb. 16, 17, and 18. Sign up in building 6, Room 201. For more information call Ext. 535 or 537.

The Vancouver ski trip is planned for February 13-14. There will be a set price for the transportation and lift ticket, which includes 12-hour round trip transportation and lift tickets. The price is $15.00 per person. The dates will be Feb. 16, 17, and 18. Sign up in building 6, Room 201. For more information call Ext. 535 or 537.

The Child Care and Developmental Center along with other Larry Holden of Campus Security will be offering free fingerprinting for children at the Child Care Center, Thursday, February 7, 9:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. This is part of a national campaign to aid in the recovery of identification of young children through their fingerprints.

Sex harassment becomes issue.

Continued from page 1: "Students usually develop a proposal for about $4500. It was being used to bring in outside help and develop educational materials. They printed existing manuals, created new materials, and made posters and a video tape. The video tape was shown in an assembly department at Shoreline with the students as actors and actresses. Dadey concluded.

Postwaite said, "I know of the things that were being done here. When I knew the subject of sexual harassment was going to be brought up at instructional council, I didn't want the students to be the only ones who knew about it. I think it's important to bring matters up in an assembly with the whole student body so that everyone can understand why the problems are important."

"The meeting was held to get an opinion vote. Then we could see if people wanted to keep studying the issue. All the votes weren't turned back in so even though the majority voted yes there wasn't enough for a quorum," Postwaite explained.

Dadey continued, "We need to have a policy on how to handle these problems. Do we want more instructional training? Should we have an advisory committee? How will we handle these problems on campus with them? Right now we don't have the answers.

Dr. Robert McFarland, Dean of Instruction, addressed the issue: "Don't think the issue has been in the last two or two in a form of discrimination." McFarland went on, "righting has always been concerned about equal opportunity as much for handicapped students as for women or minorities. We've opposed to discrimination of any type, against women, minorites or handicapped people.

McFarland went on to say, "Sexual harassment may also be in consideration of their sex. An example may be a woman in a blueprint class. The instructor helps her with the heavy work so he feels a woman might need help. It isn't fair to her because when she gets out in the job market she can't do the work.

He added, "Most women are used to being sexually harassed. Usually they drop out of the class or just ignore the harassment. Women's groups try to draw attention to it.

Postwaite said, "Most students at Shoreline, who think they've encountered sexual harassment, go to the counseling Women's Center or the Dean of students.

"There have been a lot of incidents on campuses in the workplace and educational institutions with the study of just vocational schools in the Southeastern part of the country were recently published. A survey sent out to just the teachers showed that one in six has experienced or observed sexual harassment in their workplace." According to Postwaite, "We have to have a written policy and help people understand what it is and how to use it. Otherwise, it involves people provide seminars and workshops and have guidelines. We need counseling for victims and ways to help the harasser overcome the need to harass others.

Although the Winter Quarter has just begun, there have already been several crime incidents reported, including vandalism and theft. According to Jack Chapman, Security Director, those are the first. A wide variety of items have been reported stolen, a stereo, a chainsaw, hubcaps and twenty dollars worth of candy stolen from aanhonal trend is also arising in thefts of wallets and purses in three separate cases, only credit cards were stolen.

Chapman is not limited to his own campus: "Vandalism has also occurred, most recently with damage to the college gates and a doric sign. Last quarter seven separate cases of public disturbance were also reported, as well as two cases of public indecency.

What is being done to curb campus crime? Chapman is optimistic about the future, and urges students to be aware of their surroundings. Everyone's part can make a difference. Don't leave wallets, purses or anything unattended ever, report suspicious events immediately. Sometimes just half an hour is too long." Chapman summed up by reminding students that their own personal safety is in their own hands.

"Recently a student saw a young man just walking through the parking lot for looking at cars. The student got suspicious and alerted the security department. We followed up with the young man and got his name. We took a check on the police records and discovered he had a history of auto thefts. We now know who he is and he knows we know. I'm sure he's being pretty careful because of the student's involvement, a possible deterrent in the area. That's what we like to see."
Schools lack education

By DARREN TENNISON
Managing Editor

As I sit here, trying to go into some specific reaction with my essay, I'm also trying to absorb some of the very daunting concepts that I just had with one of my members in the Journalism department. Let me relate some of it to you.

He feels that the school systems in Washington state are totally inadequate and getting worse. The sudden part is that I agree with him. As he said, we're not talking about the schools he attended in California (which was twenty years ago). I began to realize not only how different our school systems are from those down south, but how we really need to make a lot of changes. As we all know, being a teacher is a glamorous job, but do we take full responsibility for the students that we are educating.

Here's where the main point comes in. If you have attained your four-year degree, what do you do with it? Many people can't find jobs in their field due to cutbacks in teacher positions. And one of those things we have to look at is the lack of money in our system. Until we have more funding, our schools won't be able to keep up with the changes we need to make.

Today, many of us have to work to buy clothes and maintain a lifestyle. It's not only about our own personal gain, but also the quality of education we are currently getting.

STAFF OPINION

Sexual innuendoes should stop

One good turn deserves another. Nothing wrong here. But this term constitutes sexual harassment, when one person does the favor. Sexual harassment is unwelcome verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature and is against the law as closely searched by the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The Title VII test reads in part, "Sexual harassment in the workplace is clearly illegal and an offense for which the employer is held liable. Employees who are unaware of the sexual harassment incident are not immune to the law." But sexual harassment is not limited to the workplace. It can also exist in educational institutions such as Highline. Any time an instructor or advisor implies that your response to their sexual conduct will affect your grades or participation in an activity, you are experiencing sexual harass-

Shoreline Community College has had the same form of community college in the battle against sexual harassment. Through the use of media such as posters and videos, staff have increased awareness on the campus. They have put up signs in the hallways so people are aware of sexual harassment. Shoreline student government officers are hope for the future as well. Colleges including Highline will follow in their footsteps.

Last spring the issue of sexual harassment was brought to the attention of the Highline College Student Union (HCSU), which did decide to follow Shoreline's example and begin a campaign to help prevent sexual harassment.

Included in this campaign was bringing the issue before Highline's International Council, representing faculty and program administrators on the campus. It was proposed that a Council subcommittee be formed to investigate the need for educational and counseling programs on our campus.

Even though the group saw a videocassette on harassment, listened to a presentation by the woman responsible for developing the brochure program, and discussed several incidents at Highline, not enough members of the council voted in favor of forming the subcommittee. This is unfortunate, shorelines' actions were prompted by some familiar cases of sexual harassment. We hope that we can learn from the mistakes of those at Shoreline and examine and deal with the problem of harassment before there is a major incident.

Campus daycare provides unique learning program

by GEORGE KANE

The Student Child Care Development Center (SCDC) provides a developmental learning environment for the 8- to 11-year-old children on campus. The Center is sponsored by the University Union. It offers unique opportunities for students to develop skills in various areas, including social, emotional, and intellectual development. The Center is open on weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Students can participate in a variety of activities, such as arts and crafts, music, and outdoor play. The Center also offers educational and play-based activities that help children develop their skills.

Students can also participate in a unique learning program that focuses on developing a sense of comfort and understanding. The program includes activities such as arts and crafts, music, and outdoor play, which are designed to help children develop their skills.

Single parenting can be a challenging experience

by FRANCINE SIMMONS

The life of a single parent can be challenging, but there are ways to manage the situation. Being a single parent requires a lot of hard work and dedication, but it can also be rewarding.

One difference I feel about my situation is that I have more life experience and practical experience in raising children than the average single student. A single student might set a goal and get all the facts, but I set a goal, and I have to think of my goals.

Jumping into the discovery time, the children receive tickets that allow them to explore various activities. The tickets are organized on a wall, and the children can choose the activities they would like to participate in.

Rest time, free play, educational toys and games, and individual help are provided.

What would we do with the money?

While the discussions continue concerning new funding for basic building maintenance and construction on the state's community college campuses, the T-word has taken a look at HCC problems that might be solved by increased funding. Here are some examples of problems that might submit to additional legislative attention.

Planning problems...

TOP PHOTO: HCC's cafeteria has outgrown the available space for food preparation and storage. Lines for the main delivery entry hall are crammed with food storage items.

LEFT PHOTO: Many campus buildings were constructed before legal and ethical considerations of handicapped persons were required by law. For instance, the upper floor of Building 9 is inaccessible to wheelchair-bound persons.

BOTTOM PHOTO: Other areas adjacent to the cafeteria have been pressed into service as permanent "temporary" storage areas, like the electrical service area shown. Some of these storage areas do not meet various guidelines for food storage.

Just plain problems.

During the energy crisis of the 70s, attempts were made to cut back on the HCC lighting usage. Windows were opened or curtained outside lighting in non-peak campus use hours. Now, with a versatile campus lighting computer in use and new, lower wattage sodium lamps, lighting needs may be reassessed.

Some problems seemingly defy classification. Here the thermostat for a refrigeration unit in the cafeteria is shown permanently stuck in the 65 degrees above zero range. In the pre-heat of the building's slope, the west side of Building 10.

Maintenance problems...

Sections of the interior ceiling of the cafeteria are deteriorating rapidly. Here a section just above the staff door entrance is about to fall, and another section has already been removed. Several cafeteria re-design plans, "all of them very costly," are under consideration.

No fiddling around for Philadelphia String Quartet

BY AL ROOKS

A rare opportunity will unfold with the opening of violin, viola and cello cases in highline's ArtistLecture Center; an occasion where the "lecture" doesn't contain the word "lecture" and is instead for a musical evening. The Quartet was founded in 1960 by the remaining members, Irwin Eisenberg, violin, and Alan Iglitzin, viola. Together with cellist Alexander Seay and violinist and first daughter Karen Iglitzin, they have achieved a reputation throughout the world for their beauty and depth of their music.

The Highline performance is made possible in part by a grant from SAFECO, which enables the Quartet to travel to all Washington's community colleges. According to Karen Iglitzin, "Nothing is more important than a music education in the schools."

Along with masters classes and workshops, the Quartet also offers summer studies involving four select groups with whom they will study for a four-week period. The summer studies will be conducted on a site in the Port Townsend area where the Quartet and students will live and learn.

Boxes will be available at the door depending upon the number of students interested in the Quartet's summer programs. Tickets for the Highline engagement are available at BILLY BOX, 879-3710. ENJOY!

Young entrepreneur turns bikes to bucks

by SHEILA BOSWELL

Like many 14-year-olds, John Corbin goes to college and high school and works as well. However, when he goes to work he is the boss.

Corbin has spent many hours watching films of people riding bikes and skateboards. In addition, he wanted to do something constructive with his money, and after talking to his dad about it, he decided to buy some old and new bicycles as well as some stock. The company has grown rapidly.

Corbin started the business when he was 14 and has spent most of his teen years working 10 to 12 hours a week to make it successful.

Corbin's father is the boss, but some people take it to the extreme. The suicide rate for people 15 to 24 years old has risen by 30 percent in the past two decades according to U.S. News and World Report. These statistics and the concern for students at Highline have prompted student Brian Gilliam to start a new club on campus.

A year and a half later he formed a partnership with his brother-in-law and they opened the Bike Place Market in the Puyallup shopping center in Burien. The shop sells general bicycles and skateboards. In addition, it carries equipment for a new sport, snowboarding.

John Corbin at his business, Footloose Sports, in Burien.

Corbin was 12 when he earned money by sitting bicycles in a garage. However, the club's financial situation is not so rewarding for him. He has to work hard to make ends meet.

Corbin is finishing up his high school credits by attending online and is also working toward a degree in business administration at the University of Washington.

Paradise is wonderful

Any of you out there who have read this column probably know that I don't spend much time dwelling on the past. I suppose there are a lot of things about my personality, but I don't want to depress myself by getting introspective.

However, the other day, at the Urgent Care Center, I came across a sign advertising The Theatre Market in the Pike Place Market. I almost walked in, but then I remembered that I was on my way home.

On my way home, I saw a sign saying "Theatre Market." I almost walked in, but then I remembered that I was on my way home.

The sign then shifts to a trip to Cleveland on the train and his friend Eddie visits Buck and Aunt Lottie. On the way out of Cleveland, Eddie takes him on a trip to "paradise" (Florida).

There's about the whole set up. You can see why I wasn't expecting much from this movie.

However, I was pleasantly surprised when I saw the humor in the film. This is an exceedingly funny comedy. It's old, unconventional, and subtle, but funny.

Don't look for loud, slapstick comedy. This is nothing of the sort. It's a realistic comedy that plays well on some dramatically-interesting and well done editing.

The film was written and directed by Jim Jarmusch who credits be to the body of work he has done on television. Jarmusch made this movie for about $8,000, which is such a small amount of money compared to $40 million for some of today's commercials, it's amazing.

Jarmusch never married by having actors who were almost unheard of and then only billing 13 of them. I thought that there was no weak piece of acting to be found.

The joy of the movie isn't so much the fine writing but the way it's put together. The movie is a great movie. In about a week I'll be calling it the best film of the year.

I think I'd better shut up before they haul me away.

by the way, a song by sitarist Ray Devlin called "I put a spell on you" makes for a great running joke throughout the movie. If you see Stranger Than Paradise, you'll know what I mean.

I'll give this one seven out of ten stars and two towering ones just for the good music. If you get the chance and feel like browsing the 1st and Pike area of Seattle at night, it's worth the effort.
