Bookstore fare raises eyebrows

Candice Feniam and Kelly Morn
Staff Reporters
April has never looked so fine—as in Miss April, or maybe even Mister. After customer requests, Highline's bookstore is carrying Playboy and Playgirl magazines. Some students are upset by the selection, while others say they don't care.

"People don't like the magazines shouldn't read them," said student Ryan Do. "I don't have anything against them," said student Karen Doe. "Magazines shouldn't read them."

An unscientific survey distributed by student government found that 40 percent of those who responded opposed having the magazines for sale at Highline. The remainder said they are in favor or don't care.

"Magazines are not a big seller, every other week they would be gone. Both magazines are on the top row right next to People magazine. The magazines are covered with plastic to keep from pawing them. If a person looks under 18 years of age they will be carded," Miller said.

"The reason why the magazines aren't kept behind the counter is there isn't any room." Most college bookstores have Playboy and Playgirl in their stores, Miller said. Others say it's just customer request that continues to push the magazines into the book section.

"Playgirl even sometimes outsells Playboy," Miller said. "If they couldn't buy them here, they would just go somewhere else to buy them. Veterans may get partial tuition break.

William Stewardson
Staff Reporter
Highline's Board of Trustees will decide today whether to re-consider tuition breaks for Veterans and Gulliver veterans.

"We have not been happy with some of the things that we have been doing," said police chief Glenn Brooks, who has resigned after seven months at Highline. "College officials have decided that, yes, it is better that we change things around, that we need to change things around."

Within the past two pages Highline has had two police chiefs and an acting chief. Kevin Alberg resigned his position in 1996 after working here for one year. When Alberg left, Dick Maqueen stepped in as acting chief until Glenn Brooks was hired. "We would prefer not to have this rapid turnover," said Laura Saunders, vice president of administration.

For now the college is reviewing its options for the police chief position. Former campus police chief Glenn Brooks also sits at his desk, overseeing the qualifications and experience for the position. He has been president of the college since 1995. "The college is hoping to find someone new," he said. "We are looking at candidates from the community."
Building 22 to get $1.2 million makeover

By Anagha Srinivasan
Staff Reporter

Building 22 will undergo renovations this summer. It should start in June. "We are not just replacing things, we are replacing them," Babington said. The bathrooms will make wheelchair accessible and American's with Disabilities Act compliant. This project will be funded through the normal capital budget, but that only gives Highline $500,000. An additional third of the project cost will be funded by the Port of Seattle to keep airplane noise making the building quieter.

Paving might also come from a special fund for asbestos removal. Highline is currently designing the inside of the building. A design team is working with service providers to get their input and ideas.

A service provider is anyone who teaches in the building, custodial, maintenance, and security next year with no disruption to classes.

International students find home at Highline

By Anagha Srinivasan
Staff Reporter

Small size and a gorgeous view of Puget Sound have helped convince many international students that Highline is one of the best colleges in the Seattle area. About 140 international students are enrolled at Highline. Students come from around the world after talking with friends already here. They also find it in college guides, or come via placement agencies or advisers.

"I know HCC by my adviser at Seattle University, but I wasn't so sure to come until my best family mentioned HCC," said student Feri Dong. Some students say they were impressed by the school on their first day here. "I loved this college at first sight," Yoko Sekiguchi said. "It is small, nice and I love the environment. We have trees and Puget Sound. This is more than I'm asking," said student Sakkanet Chitsurman. This winter is my first quarter and I cannot find any class interesting to me that is available for Spring Quarter because they are full now," Hisayo Tsukuda said last month.

International students say they would like to see a greater variety of courses offered, however. Students also would like to see campus facilities open longer.

"I loved this college at first sight. It is small, nice and I love the environment," Yoko Sekiguchi said.

"I don't like students here. They are not friendly. My classmates never help me with anything although they know I am an international student." Mihoko Yukita

International student

is one of the best colleges in Seattle. The facilities are very bad and it has everything for us here. This is excellent," said Sai K.

International students say they would like to see a greater variety of courses offered, however.

"This winter is my first quarter and I cannot find any class interesting to me that is available for Spring Quarter because they are full now," Hisayo Tsukuda said last month.

Students also would like to see campus facilities open longer.

"I loved this college at first sight. It is small, nice and I love the environment," Yoko Sekiguchi said.

International student

er. "The cafeteria should be open longer for us to eat and talk to our friends," Ms. Chai said.

"I don't know why the pool is closing at 2 p.m.," and Naomi Tsukuda. "This is the time that most students finish their class. The gym is big but not many students can use it, because it is always being used for games or practices."

Some international students don't like HCC because they don't find students here to be friendly. "I don't like students here," said Mihoko Yukita. "They are not friendly. My classmates never help me with anything although they know I am an international student."

College officials say they try to help international students to fit in.

"A few of the international students cannot stand American culture and this is a problem we are trying to help with," said International student adviser Jack Holt. "We have the International Club to help the students make friends with native Americans. I see many students happily chatting."

International student Nathapatra Thong agreed. "I think HCC is a very good college, although students are not so friendly but the professors are very nice. They help me and never leave me behind the other students."

Students needed for clean-up

By Anagha Srinivasan
Staff Reporter

Students are welcome to attend a family pool party at Highline's pool on Friday from 7-9 p.m. Tickets are available from the Student Programs Office in Building 8. Adults are $1 and children are 50 cents.

All children must be accompanied by an adult. Each child under age 6 must have an one-to-one ratio with an adult in the water.

Drum concert teaches culture

Seattle Koko Taiko Drums will be performing in the Student Lounge of Building 8 from noon to 12:45 p.m. on April 15. The performance will include both lectures and demonstrations that will tell students about the history and music of Japan's oldest and most traditional drums.

"I saw HCC as very quiet and boring, but not anymore after I came to college for two weeks," a student said. Some international students say they like Highline better than other colleges they have attended.

"I have been in Bellevue Community College and the only thing I can say is Highline is one of the best colleges in Seattle. The facilities are very bad and it has everything for us here. This is excellent," said Sai K.

"This winter is my first quarter and I cannot find any class interesting to me that is available for Spring Quarter because they are full now," Hisayo Tsukuda said last month.

"I don't like students here. They are not friendly. My classmates never help me with anything although they know I am an international student," Mihoko Yukita said.

International student

is one of the best colleges in Seattle. The facilities are very bad and it has everything for us here. This is excellent," said Sai K.

"This winter is my first quarter and I cannot find any class interesting to me that is available for Spring Quarter because they are full now," Hisayo Tsukuda said last month.

"I don't like students here," said Mihoko Yukita. "They are not friendly. My classmates never help me with anything although they know I am an international student."

College officials say they try to help international students to fit in.

"A few of the international students cannot stand American culture and this is a problem we are trying to help with," said International student adviser Jack Holt. "We have the International Club to help the students make friends with native Americans. I see many students happily chatting."

International student Nathapatra Thong agreed. "I think HCC is a very good college, although students are not so friendly but the professors are very nice. They help me and never leave me behind the other students."

Students needed for clean-up

By Anagha Srinivasan
Staff Reporter

Students are welcome to attend a family pool party at Highline's pool on Friday from 7-9 p.m. Tickets are available from the Student Programs Office in Building 8. Adults are $1 and children are 50 cents.

All children must be accompanied by an adult. Each child under age 6 must have an one-to-one ratio with an adult in the water.

Drum concert teaches culture

Seattle Koko Taiko Drums will be performing in the Student Lounge of Building 8 from noon to 12:45 p.m. on April 15. The performance will include both lectures and demonstrations that will tell students about the history and music of Japan's oldest and most traditional drums.

"I saw HCC as very quiet and boring, but not anymore after I came to college for two weeks," a student said. Some international students say they like Highline better than other colleges they have attended.

"I have been in Bellevue Community College and the only thing I can say is Highline is one of the best colleges in Seattle. The facilities are very bad and it has everything for us here. This is excellent," said Sai K.

"This winter is my first quarter and I cannot find any class interesting to me that is available for Spring Quarter because they are full now," Hisayo Tsukuda said last month.

"I don't like students here. They are not friendly. My classmates never help me with anything although they know I am an international student," Mihoko Yukita said.

International student

is one of the best colleges in Seattle. The facilities are very bad and it has everything for us here. This is excellent," said Sai K.

"This winter is my first quarter and I cannot find any class interesting to me that is available for Spring Quarter because they are full now," Hisayo Tsukuda said last month.

"I don't like students here," said Mihoko Yukita. "They are not friendly. My classmates never help me with anything although they know I am an international student."

College officials say they try to help international students to fit in.

"A few of the international students cannot stand American culture and this is a problem we are trying to help with," said International student adviser Jack Holt. "We have the International Club to help the students make friends with native Americans. I see many students happily chatting."

International student Nathapatra Thong agreed. "I think HCC is a very good college, although students are not so friendly but the professors are very nice. They help me and never leave me behind the other students."
Gerry’s garden grows Northwest plants

The Native Plant Habitat Garden, located between Buildings 12 and the greenhouse, began five years ago as a mere sprout when student Kathy Hamon, then botany tutor for Barclay, became involved. Because Hamon was studying to be a landscape architect, Barclay thought she might be interested in planning and creating the garden.

“I thought it was a great opportunity,” Hamon said. Barclay, Carlson, and Hamon formed a committee to begin formulating ways to make the garden grow into reality. They decided that the four habitats regions in Washington would be represented: the Coastal, Western, Alpine, and Eastern habitats.

“It’s an educational garden where they can learn not only about the plants in the garden but about their habitat, as well.”

For more than a year, the three botanical museums researched plants native to this region. Plants, flowers, trees and shrubs were chosen, but without money no green could be seen.

Hamon wrote up a mock $500 grant for an assignment in her technical writing class. Seeking its potential, Highline’s grant writer, Cindy Gregg, modified the proposal and sent off the $22,500 grant request to the Urban Resources Partnership Program. In November, 1995 the grant was given to Highline. The Undersecretary of Agriculture for Natural Resources and Environment, Jim Lyons, then King County Executive Gary Locke presented the grant in a public ceremony.

Barclay, Carlson, and Hamon finally had the resources needed to follow through with their dream. All the native plants had been researched—now the three had to locate them. Finding nurseries that carried Northwest exclusives, like Birthwort spires and sand verbena, took them to 10 mom-and-pop nurseries throughout the state. Usually buying more than one variation per species, over 100 species were purchased.

Grounds crew prepared the site, and Biology 119 students pitched in to help with the planting.

The grand opening will be sometime during spring quarter. Open to high schools and the public, the Native Plant Habitat Garden will coordinate the scientific and common names of plants. Jim Plogh, designer and creator of the icon poles on campus, hand carved and painted the garden's sign.

Students experience many major changes

Dana Joseph
Staff Reporter

A majority of students at Highline Community College have changed their intended course of study at least once since they started college. A recent survey of 100 students indicated that 62 students have made the switch.

The reasons cited for changing majors are many, but 40 of the 62 students have switched on other professions have done so because the new choice provided them with the opportunity to make more money.

Sara Moulines changed her major from medical exception to law enforcement because she will take less classes. Sara has a child and feels that she should complete school and begin working as soon as possible. Five other students are also shortening their time in school by choosing a course of study with fewer required classes.

Of the students surveyed, 16 plan to continue on to a four-year school with majors ranging from engineering and teaching to journalism and dentistry. Eight of these students expect to achieve a master’s degree or higher and eight of them want to leave with a bachelor’s degree. None of the 16 have changed their educational focus.

Gerry Barclay, Linda Carlson and Stuhs the cat relax in Highline’s native plant garden.

"Well, I am good at math so I chose to go into accounting.

Highline Student"
Editorial

Committee proposes solid plan for building 8

Coming soon...to a Student Center near you...Dances!...Concerts!...and vending machines?

The Short Range Building 8 Remodeling Committee is working with Donna Pratt's Interior Design Class this quarter to design a floor plan proposal for the renovation of the Student Center.

The challenge before them is to fit as many services and features into the available space, while keeping the space as flexible as possible to allow for dances and concerts.

In response to last quarter's student survey, the committee and design class will be working from a list of options that the students deemed most important.

Two options that are being considered are a convenience store and a copy center. The convenience store would feature on and off campus mail, stamps, cards, balloons, magazines, flowers, food and snacks and a possible Ticketmaster outlet. The copy center would provide a phone for free local calls, typ., pens, pencils, paper, stapler, hole punch, trading post bulletin board, fax machine and a copy machine.

Other options being considered are a quiet study area, a film/video/TV room, games area, ATM, lockers and storage area, offices for Events Board, Associated Students of Highline Community College and a space for clubs.

Plans are moving steadily along and Dennis Stenby, spokesman for the committee, feels confident that they will have a floor plan to present to you by the final Spring quarter issue of the Thunderword.

Elect W.B. ruler of world

The major problem with the world is that it lacks direction.

That's why I propose that the world declare me Lord Ruler of All Things that We Know Exist and Most of the Things We don't Know about Yet.

Finally, the world unanimously condemns everyone the world over. I'd like to defend my stance as will don't knock it till you try.

While placing me as the effective dictator of the world may not sound like the best idea, it does have its advantages (no matter how few).

First, all monetary problems would disappear within a matter of moments since I would require everyone to give me all of their money.

This letter is concerning the article on Susan Landgraf in the February 27 issue of the Thunderword. I wanted to say a job well done on writing about Terri decision (pun intended).

I took her Mass Media class in 1995, and learned more in that class than newly any other I've taken at Highline.

I will soon be a journalism graduate from Western Washington University, and I have Susan Landgraf to thank for her encouragement, and faith in me. On the contrary, I have few praising words for Terry Sacks, except that he was a great journalist.

No one should be condemning teaching styles like Landgraf's because they are effective, challenging, interesting, and most of all students learn from her classes. Isn't that what college is all about?

I put Susan Landgraf's methods of teaching at the top of the list. She should be praised for her excellence in teaching, not the opposite. Again, good job T-Word staff for writing the story.

Sincerely,
Alisha Holdener

On the Wild Side

W.B. Heming

world would be reduced to the barrier system. However, people like old fashioned things. Finally, war and all other forms of violence would cease; not so much because I'm a pacifist, as I am just lazy.

Of course, the only art form may be interpretive dance, mostly because I like it.

Immediately, even the most rational of people jump to the UFO defense. Stated simply, the UFO defense demands that I have a policy for dealing extraterrestrial life.

My policy, stated simply, is to force them to obey me or die trying.

Like I said before, don't knock it till you try it.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

This letter is concerning the article on Susan Landgraf in the February 27 issue of the Thunderword. I wanted to say a job well done on writing about Landgraf who is an outstanding professor.

I took her Mass Media class in 1995, and learned more in that class than newly any other I've taken at Highline.

I will soon be a journalism graduate from Western Washington University, and I have Susan Landgraf to thank for her encouragement, and faith in me. On the contrary, I have few praising words for Terry Sacks, except that he was a great journalist.

No one should be condemning teaching styles like Landgraf's because they are effective, challenging, interesting, and most of all students learn from her classes. Isn't that what college is all about?

I put Susan Landgraf's methods of teaching at the top of the list. She should be praised for her excellence in teaching, not the opposite. Again, good job T-Word staff for writing the story.

Sincerely,
Alisha Holdener

Focus on what you enjoy

Spring is here and many of you are set to transfer to universities next fall. Well, with this kind of move comes a lot of anxiety. I know how you feel, because I'm going through it myself.

My anxiety hasn't stemmed so much from moving to a bigger school, and stepping away from KCC, but rather now that I'll have completed my A A degree, I need to narrow my scope and decide on a major. I have been trying to decide on one for years now. Just like anyone, I want to make good money when I'm done with school, so this has always been an influential factor in trying to nail down, "what I'm going to be when I grow up." Another part of me urges me to do something I enjoy, whether it's going to make me rich or not. I suppose this is common for most people when they set out to make this "major" decision (pun intended).

However, some people are lucky because they seem confident in what they want to do the rest of their lives. I envy these people.

So anyway, as I said, I have struggled with this dilemma for years now, and to be honest I'm not entirely sure. As a matter of fact, I'm beginning to come to the realization that I may never be entirely sure, and I think that this is OK.

Amongst all of my indecisiveness, I have come up with some concrete ideas that have helped me to navigate my way through school and onto my future. I may never be sure what I want to do for "the rest of my life," because as it is right now I still have a lot of life ahead of me. So, I made it a point to enjoy the present as much as possible and not to worry excessively about the future. So, more often than not, I listen to the part of me that tells me to do something I enjoy. Right now I enjoy being a student. I enjoy becoming a more intelligent person, and learning about the world I live in. I don't make as much money being a student, as I would working full time, but, school is helping to shape me as a person everyday. Money can only buy material things that cover your exterior; it won't help to make the person. And going to a job everyday, gets old pretty quick, whereas even though school is hard work, it's different everyday. So, by doing what I enjoy I feel I've made the right choice.

Everybody has subjects in school that they enjoy more than others, and I personally like to write (never would have guessed it). So, that being the case I decided to get into some journalism classes, and eventually I ended up as an editor as well, which is fun, challenging, and might lead me to further employment down the road.

So, I guess what I'm trying to say is that, I started going down the path of my life not really having a specific direction in mind, but by following what my heart told me, and sticking with things that I find enjoyable, I think I'm on my way to a fulfilled life. I've watched people go into fields just for the money and they end up unfulfilled, and back in school so they can get into a career that they enjoy, and brings them fulfillment. Don't get me wrong, it usually takes hard work getting anywhere you want to go, but do yourself a favor, be happy once you get there.

The Thunderword

No animals were harmed in the production of this newspaper.

Editor in Chief..........................Carmine Coburn
Managing Editor.........................W.B. Heming
Graphics Editor.........................Chris Griffin
Sports Editor..............................Tim Wyse
Arts Editor...............................Lisa Curdoy
Photo Editor.............................Bruce Jarrell
Cartoonist...............................Jake Dill
Business Manager.......................Anita Coppola
Distribution Manager...............Sherrill Ingemann
Chief Copy Editor......................Gina Carpintino
Copy Editor.............................Lee Gillerwater
Reporters, A.Y. Akpata, J. Chase, Ben Erickson, Candice Fenison, Joe McLaughlin, William Staehla, Alicia Bennett, Kristen Brooks, Brook Bebech, Kristen Brown, Amanda Haugen, Christi Croft, Patricia Fleming, Reagan Freed, Aaron Glasgow, Sebastian Guerin, Monique Kredel, Kristiandku Raumonskul, Loren Legendre, Stetsonua McDaniels, Ethan McDonald,Stacey Montague, Young Noh, Anthony Ross, Karen Schell, Barry Stovar, Jeff Wilham, Jane Young
Youth Advr.........................T.M. Sell

PO Box 80000 DeSmoines, WA 98519
Building 10, Room 106

Newswall..................................879-5710 ext. 5318
Advertising..............................879-5710 ext. 8291
Life at HCC: talk already!

Ah, a new quarter is in the air! Smells of acid nervous sweat permeate from students as they sell their tube socks for that rise of passage, that journey into the unknown, that episode of higher education - on-campus housing.

Upon checking in, you get a key and a Code of Conduct. You walk up to your room in silence. “Speak to no one, look at no one, make friends as little as possible,” says rule 54.421 in the Code.

You might have the roommate from hell, but you’re not alone—after all, he doesn’t talk either.

In class, people float into their seats, take notes, and laugh. The occasional chatter box laughs at herself as she finds a sheet of fabric softer stuck to her shirt.

But there’s always after-class activities. On movie nights, “Hell” is the flick of choice. Its scary, because you can relate to Neil.

You say to yourself, “I too, feel like a spy in the unknown. I too, am searching for a socio-personal identity. This speechless life we lead on campus is so isolating, what can I do?”

As you file back to your dorm for the evening, you begin to show more stress and boogie signs. You have realized how to make each day a happy one for you and the other students.

All you have to do is break ye old comfort barrier and talk.

---

Gardiner harvests images

Patricia Fleming
Staff Reporter

Open your eyes and capture "Anomalies & Ancient Places," an exhibition of photography and sculpture, by Jim Gardiner.

The photographs and sculptures in this exhibition are the result of a one-year professional development leave. Gardiner spent three months photographing The Outer Hebrides in Ireland and the entire United Kingdom.

"The main source of inspiration was Neolithic stone circles and tombs. Some are well known, such as Stonehenge and Avebury in England. The most intriguing however, were lesser known in remote back country locations," Gardiner said.

"Many hours were spent crawling around busy under-ground tombs...at night or very early in the morning to catch the mood of the site with the time of day. There was always the feeling that something had been going on for thousands of years," he said.

Gardiner has been a full-time instructor of photography and art design since 1966. He takes an interest in photography that emphasizes and that they appreciate the true beauty of art. Gardiner's art is a replica of himself, sometimes serious and sometimes silly.

One-acts are a series of short plays. At least five published plays will be performed, with 6 acts available.

The acts will be directed by students who have taken pre-requisite courses in acting and directing. The student directors as well as Rick Lorig, Costume Designer, and Christiana Taylor, Drama department head, will be in charge of the productions.

"One acts are very popular. Students love students' work," Taylor said. "One-acts are a way for students to experience the mood of the site and the smell of the grease paint."

Taylor also said that the acting times were flexible and the audience is small. The plays will be performed during the Spring Quarter.

Brandon Felker, who has played parts in three one-act productions in the last three years, said he enjoys them because they are directed by students. "It's more of a collaboration because you're working with someone who's on the same level as you," Felker said.

Felker recommends preparing a monologue for the auditions, but students can read, sing, or even tell jokes. Many of the students who audition are students who have never acted before.

One-acts will run May 14-17, at 8 p.m.

---

Yuck it up at the Comedy Cafe

Jeff Wilkinson
Staff Reporter

The Comedy Cafe hits Highline once again Friday, April 18, at Tazza Espresso and Bakery in the lower level of Building 8.

Ticket prices are $4 in advance and $6 at the door. Tickets are available from the Student Programs Office in Building 1.

Showtime is 8 p.m., but the doors will open at 7:30 p.m. at which time Tazza will be open for service. Food and beverages will not be served after 8 p.m., so come early.

The comedians performing will be Angie Smith and Matt Riedy. They will perform at the Comedy Cafe on April 18.

The comedians next to one of his sculptures in Building 3.

"Anomalies & Ancient Places" is on exhibit April 7-25.

---

Gardiner next to one of his sculptures in Building 3.

Annie Smith and Matt Riedy will be performing at the Comedy Cafe on April 18.

The comedy routine will last hour and a half.

The acts will be directed by students who have taken pre-requisite courses in acting and directing. The student directors as well as Rick Lorig, Costume Designer, and Christiana Taylor, Drama department head, will be in charge of the productions.

"One acts are very popular. Students love students' work," Taylor said. "One-acts are a way for students to experience the mood of the site and the smell of the grease paint."

Taylor also said that the acting times were flexible and the audience is small. The plays will be performed during the Spring Quarter.

Brandon Felker, who has played parts in three one-act productions in the last three years, said he enjoys them because they are directed by students. "It's more of a collaboration because you're working with someone who's on the same level as you," Felker said.

Felker recommends preparing a monologue for the auditions, but students can read, sing, or even tell jokes. Many of the students who audition are students who have never acted before.

One-acts will run May 14-17, at 8 p.m.
Sports

April 10, 1997

Track team loses eight to grades

T-Birds tuned for track opener

Bryan McDonald
Staff Reporter

The Highline High School's track and field team is tuned up and ready to roll as conference competition starts Saturday, April 12, with the Mount Hood Relays in Gresham, Ore.

After finishing off the exhibition schedule with solid performances at the Salmon Invitational and the Spring Break Open, the team is looking sound.

They are facing a strong conference and division this year.

Numerous athletes have already put up conference qualifying marks, but unfortunately they will not carry over into the regular season.

Teshande Brown has achieved a solid time in the 100 meters with an 11.47 mark and Dave Blair has had solid performances in both the 200 meters and the 4x400 relay team. Shelby Buchanon, also a member in the 4x400, set a personal record in the 400 meters with a time of 48.39.

The competitors in the field events have been working hard, too. Brian Glawson has had success throwing the javelin with qualifying marks as high as 177.6 and Brent Twaddle is throwing the shot-put well this year.

The team will now set its sights on the Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges Championships in late May.

Intramurals offers hoops, pickleball

Aaron Glawson
Staff Reporter

Spring Intramurals will start Monday, April 14, featuring three-on-three basketball and pickleball. A fee of $5 per participant will be collected. For the entry fee each participant will receive a Spring Intramurals T-shirt and a barbecue will be held on the day of the championships.

Three-on-three basketball will be on Mondays and Wednesdays from 2 to 3:30 p.m. There is a six-player limit for each team.

Pickleball will be on Tuesdays and Thursdays also from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Singles and doubles will be played, but you do not have to have a partner.

"It's fun for all, there is good competition and it's a great way to get exercise and I encourage everyone to participate," said John Dunn, one of the coordinators of intramurals.

There will also be a two-day softball tournament toward the end of the quarter, featuring 10-person teams and three-inning games. The faculty already has a team and is awaiting a challenge.

For more information contact Spring Intramurals contact John Dunn at 878-3710, ext. 3455, or Cyndi Hoyt at 3459. You can find either of them in Building 20 or at the Pavilion.

Highline recreation options are sparse

By Brooks Babcock
Staff Reporter

Recreational programs are offered at most four-year schools and some community colleges, but not here at Highline.

A recreational program can offer anything from renting out equipment to taking skydiving trips. Green River Community College has offered its students and community these services for more than 10 years now.

Green River gives the recreational program a yearly budget of $6,000, but Jeff Hovea, outdoor programs coordinator for the second year at Green River, says that most of the budget is covered by rental costs.

Diane Anderson, Highline's first-year director of Student Programs, says that a recreational program wouldn't be too hard to get started. Programs and events (such as hiking trips) could get under way somewhat easily, while renting out equipment would require more money since space, equipment, and money are all issues.

The lack of student interest and maybe priorities has kept

See Recreation, page 7

Student Painters
Now hiring for summer work.
$7.00 an hour.
Incentives.
Call Lucas at:
246-4252

Chiropractic care provided to relieve symptoms of:
Headaches
Stress-Neck & Back pain
Atlanto-occipital
Injuries-Car Accidents

Call Today For a Free Consultation
878-1111

9180 Pacific Highway So., Sea-Tac
T-Birds streak to seven straight wins

David Blair
Staff Reporter

The Highline women's softball team is red hot after a sluggish start to the regular season. The team is currently on a seven-game winning streak heading into this week's games. The T-Birds' most recent victim was Shoreline, which Highline blanked 1-0 and 4-3. The first game featured Katie deCastro's two-hit pitching.

"I could not have done it without the help of our great defense," deCastro said.

The streak began with a 5-1 victory over Wenatchee, followed by a 16-0 crushing of Skagit Valley. deCastro shut down Skagit's offensive attack by pitching a no-hitter. deCastro followed that with a one-hitter in an 8-0 victory, again over Skagit. Last Friday's doubleheader with Shoreline resulted in 7-2 and 13-2 victories.

Head Coach Cara Hoyt is pleased with the team's performance. "They're having a lot of fun out there. The whole team is giving 100 percent and everyone is contributing," she said.

The lady T-Birds had a difficult time adjusting to the outdoor game at the beginning of the season. "All of our preseason games were ruined out, and we only had one outdoor practice before the season started," Hoyt said.

"Playing indoors is a lot different than playing outdoors. The lighting is different outdoors, and takes some getting used to. We also are different only one game due to rainfall, losing 3-0. The T-Birds then lost both games to Spokane, 9-1 and 18-9.

"Spokane is definitely going to be the team to beat this year. They've got powerful hitters, and are consistently tough every year," Hoyt said.

The team finished their drought with a 3-0 loss to Wenatchee before beginning their winning streak. "We're going to be good this year. We can beat any team out there, we just need to play as a team. With all our potential we should take the NWACC championship," Nicole Elder said.

The team is currently 9-6 for the year and continuing to get better. "We're on an upswing now. Everyone is extremely enthusiastic. Our errors are really coming down allowing us to play better defense," Hoyt said.

The team's first two games of the season were against Wenatchee. They lost the first game 5-0 and the second 5-1. They then came back to defeat Yakima 16-0 and 12-1. They played Edmonds in

Recreation

Continued from page 6

Highline from "bringing people together with common interest," Anderson said.

While taking a trip through Green River's recreational program last year, Anderson saw something more than fun taking place. She saw people getting to know each other and starting friendships, something you can't do by watching a movie with a bunch of strangers on campus. "If students are interested, I'd love to see it offered here," Anderson said.

At Green River, Haben not only rents out equipment, he organizes trips taken each quarter. Rentals include cross-country skis, snow shoes, hiking boots, tennis, cooking gear, maps of the Olympics and Cascades, and even backpacks, among other things.

Whitewater rafting, whale watching, eagle tours, skiing, snowboarding, backpacking in the Cascades, and even a yearly trip to the Bavarian Alps for the Oktoberfest are just a few of the trips Haben has led and attended with the help of hired professional guides.

These trips have been a strong, year-round feature of the school, giving students a chance to travel and explore outside the classroom environment.

The lady T-Birds head into this weekend's games with a 3-0 victory over Wenatchee, followed by a 16-0 crushing of Skagit Valley. deCastro's two-hit pitching was key in the victory over Wenatchee, and she followed that up with a no-hitter in the second game. deCastro has been her usual dominant self, striking out batters at will.

The T-Birds are looking to continue their winning streak this weekend, heading into Thursday's games at Bellevue, 2 p.m. They play at Wenatchee, 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 15.
HCC speaks on dating and sex

Rachel Noff and
Meghan Fenton
Staff reporters

Dating trends are constantly changing, and there is no specific pattern or repetition in dating today.

Highline students are no exception to this assumption. "It keeps up with the trends pretty much," Wendi Gousha, a sophomore in psychology said.

Of 500 students surveyed at Highline, one in five women and one in six men said they were "in love" after just one date. This was a light percent compared to previous classes in the school.

30 percent wanted more advances in a shorter time and more money.

When students are looking for a romantic date, money and looks are a major factor, though personality had a lot to do with it.

Increasingly, the trend is to choose a partner based on shared activities and interests. A recent survey by the National Center for Health Statistics found that 42 percent of American adults are single.

In Vietnam, the cost of a credit hour was $8.40 during the Vietnam era and is now $46.70. For more information on educational benefits, The Veteran's Club and Job Services for Veterans, stop by the Veterans Wunce in Building A.

Veterans

continued from page 1

When the Veterans En Vene-
ures (SEA-VET) waivers were removed, all SEA-VETs in attendance
were asked if they would grant them.

When the Veterans En Vene-
ures (SEA-VET) waivers were removed, all SEA-VETs in attendance
were asked if they would grant them.

They were given an option to accept (including veterans) and then their waivers were filed.

The waivers can be subsequent to veterans, $8.40 per credit for a SEA-VET and $46.70 for a GI Veteran. The benefits also provide specific atmosphere. Thus, the cap of a credit hour was $8.40 during the Vetner era and is now $46.70.

For more information on educational benefits, The Vet-ner's Club and Job Services for Vetners, stop by the Veterans Wunce in Building A.

Pathways to the Future

- Business & Marketing
- Arts & Communication
- Health & Human Services
- Industry & Technology
- Environment & Natural Sciences

Friday, May 2, 1997 - 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.
Highline Community College
2400 South 240th Street, Des Moines,
Building 28 - Pavilion

For more information, call 878-5710,
Ext. 3343